New ambulance attendants will mean faster response time, managers agree

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

Ambulance services in Haliburton and Minden will hire six new full-time attendants by mid-June because of an additional $260,000 in funding from the provincial Ministry of Health.

"We're excited about it," says Dysart et al clerk-treasurer Wayne Wood, whose duty it is to try to find part-time attendants to answer calls when the two full-time workers are busy. "We've waited a long time for it."

"It's going to mean faster response time and it will give us more around-the-clock coverage," adds the supervisor of the Minden and District Ambulance Service, Rob Luke. "This is going to help us out quite a bit."

At present, there are full-time ambulance attendants in Haliburton who in theory staff one ambulance during the day shift, five days a week. If an emergency calls come in when it's not their shift, or if both ambulances are needed at the same time, part-time attendants are called in.

Finding those part-time attendants can sometimes be a difficult task. It's not that there aren't men who are willing to take the training, but it's often hard to keep a full-time job at the same time.

"The demands on the part-time people are great," says Wood. "People can't leave their job for four or five hours—their employer won't let them. It's most difficult to get people. They're willing but their jobs just won't allow them to do these things."

This all leads to an over-burdened ambulance staff. In Haliburton, the ambulance staff responds to approximately 3,000 calls a year, which works out to 10 calls a day. Some of those calls involve a lot of travelling, and it isn't uncommon to put 100 miles on the ambulance just answering one call. Not only do

Gypsy moth infestation due in 3 to 5 years: MNR

by KEITH SCHAEFER
Staff Reporter

RIGHT NOW now Haliburton County is in the midst of the worst infestation of Bruce Spanworm ever. The east and west forest tent caterpillars are invading this summer in large numbers also. And now there is a new kid on the block, and it is hungry. Meet the gypsy moth.

The gypsy moth is everywhere in Ontario. MNR fly traps have caught them in the Haliburton area. But for now, they are most concentrated in the Kaladar, Sharbot Lake, Renfrew area. And, lucky for us, the main thrust of their spread seems to be east-northeast. Pockets, or hot spots of gypsy moth have broken out as near as Peterborough, however.

Alan Dolan, information officer for the MNR Gypsy Moth Program for eastern Ontario, says Haliburton can expect an infestation of a noticeable degree in three to five years. The county and the Ministry of Natural Resources in Minden are concerned enough about the problem they took a day trip Monday to Irvine Lake airstrip, where aerial spraying goes on to try to control the new pest.

The Ministry says eastern Ontario has never seen anything which poses a greater threat to the environment than the gypsy moth. Because it was introduced to North America from Europe, it has few natural enemies. It can reproduce at an alarming rate, and it has an almost insatiable appetite. Not only can it spread by the wind, but it attaches itself to cars, and campers knapsacks, to be transported all over the countryside.

The gypsy moth, like the Bruce Spanworm and the tent caterpillars, defoliate the trees by eating the leaves and leaving the tree bare. They actually complement each other nicely. The Bruce Spanworm likes sugar maples the best. The gypsy moth has been known to eat every hardwood around a sugar maple; it is especially fond of oak trees, then poplar and birch, and leave the sugar maple intact.

The gypsy moth likes warm, dry conditions, so it can usually be found on the south side of a hill. It stays away from swamps.

But the gypsy moth can reproduce so fast (up to 1200 eggs a year) that it infests an area in a sudden way. Once they get a hold of an area, they multiply by the millions. Because there are so many of them, and they hatch over three to four weeks, they have a longer feeding time than most insects—six to nine weeks. And they just blanket the area they eat.

"In the summer, you can hear the frass (excrement falling to the ground)," says Pia Vaikla, public information officer for the program. "It sounds like rain sometimes. Think of psychological effect that has on cottagers and resort owners."

"You even have to walk around with your finger in your beer bottle."

Hiking, cottaging or camping with heavy gypsy moth populations can be bothersome. The caterpillars are everywhere. They're underfoot, crawling on roofs and walls, covering picnic benches and in tents. Droppings fall on people walking under trees. The larvae and pupae have a bad odour.

Forestry is also at risk. By defoliating the trees, the gypsy moth takes away some of the energy of the tree. The tree will possibly re-foliate, which means it is using energy that it would normally use in the winter. That slows the tree's growth and makes it more susceptible to disease.

'Think of the psychological effect on cottagers and resort owners.'

Wildlife suffers when the moths attack. Ministry of Natural Resources wildlife biologist John Williamson says, "In parts of eastern Ontario, acorns may account for up to 50 percent of the fall food for white-tail deer. If those acorns aren't present, the deer could go into winter short of energy. And gypsy moth attacks on evergreen trees can cause immediate loss of winter sheltering areas for the deer."

Although we're hearing about the dangers of the gypsy moths now, they have been in North America for over 100 years. A cotton shortage in the United States during the civil war made a French naturalist and entrepreneur try to make silk in America. He hoped to make a strong silk by cross-breeding the American silk moth with the European gypsy moth. The man packed his bags, including some gypsy moths and immigrated to Boston.

His experiment failed, and he went back to France, but the gypsy moths stayed behind. In 10 years, the surrounding country was covered in caterpillars. Infestations have now been recorded in 35 states.

Haliburton area lake levels are decided by a computer

by KEITH SCHAEFER
Staff Reporter

CALCULATING what the water levels should be of more than 50 lakes might seem like a nearly impossible job to some. Complex mathematics is used, and different factors, such as how much water has been fed into the lake from the one upstream, how much precipitation has fallen and how big the water basin for the lake is, all must be taken into account.

But for Bruce Kitchen, it's as easy as pushing a button. Kitchen is a water control engineer for the Trent-Severn-Waterway at its headquarters in Peterborough. He uses a computer to do all his figuring, and gets a wealth of information back that tells him how high Trent reservoir lake levels should be, including those here in Haliburton County.

"A computer is much faster than working it out by hand. When you work with about 50 lakes, including the ones on the Trent, that makes for a lot of time," said Kitchen.

The Waterway has been timesharing a computer in Toronto since 1974. But this year, an engineering consulting firm is coming to Peterborough to work out a few bugs in the program, and work the system so a minicomputer can be set up at headquarters.

Even though there is not a lot of mathematics for Kitchen, the computer program is quite involved. The whole process starts when Haliburton area manager Mike Jamieson phones in the levels of the lakes to Kitchen in Peterborough.

Kitchen has a sheet, with all the lakes in the Haliburton reservoir system numbered on it. Numbers go from upstream to downstream, left branch of the river to the right branch. On this sheet he records the lake levels Jamieson gives him. He then checks the levels with graphs of the corresponding lakes which tell him what the runs of each will be.

And Kitchen knows that graph is accurate. Waterway workers have actually gone out and physically metered the flow of the river at different water levels. After doing so many readings, it is possible to plot a linear relationship between the emergencies happen all over the county, but local medical services cannot deal with every medical emergency. For every local call, Wood says there are two to Peterborough.

"You just work your hind end off," says Wood, who also dedicates much of his time to ensuring county residents get the fast and efficient service they need. His staff have "loyalty and dedication with very little money—it's just a general interest in other people's well being."

A part-time attendant, who must have passed courses in first aid, radio, and CPR as well as have a Class F licence, makes $1 an hour if they're on call and $7 an hour if they work. Throughout the years, Wood has made sure his men take every course available and many of his people have passed the Emergency Medical Care Attendants Course through Sir Sandford Fleming College with high honours. They've put in 400 hours at hospitals and spent many more hours taking courses set up by the Ministry of Health. Full-time workers must pass a provincial examination regularly. "They've paid their dues."

Now that the Ministry of Health has approved an extra $150,000, Haliburton will be able to hire four more full-time attendants. This means Wood can provide 24-hour coverage, seven days a week and perhaps justify getting another ambulance to service the area. Besides offering more employment and relaxing the demands on part-time people, Wood says this means they will be able to answer calls much faster. Men won't have to be awakened at all times of the night to come to the station to answer a call—there will already be men there, cutting down on the time it takes for an ambulance crew to respond to an emergency situation.

In Minden, the two full-time and six part-time attendants are responsible for 1,086 square miles, covering the area from two miles south of Dorset to two miles south of Norland. The respond to between 900 and 1,000 calls a year, and it is for these reasons that Luke has been pressing for more funding.

His department will receive an additional $110,000 annually, enabling him to hire two more full-time attendants and increase the coverage to 24 hours a day, seven days a week. "I feel pretty good about that."

Ambulance service does not run the same way fire departments do, with mutual aid agreements ensuring that if there are not enough men from one municipality to answer a call, others will send over their trucks and men. If the one ambulance in Minden is on call, then Haliburton will send over one of their ambulances and all calls are placed on a priority basis. For instance, when the ambulance is out, a transfer from the hospital to nursing home will be put on hold until Luke can be sure he has enough man power.

One of the problems Luke has run into is being called in to attend an emergency situation after he's already put in a full shift. In the busy summer months, Luke can't blame the men who don't think they can volunteer their time as attendants after putting in 12-hours days at their regular jobs. With a small population to draw from, finding part-time attendants has always been a problem.

Anson, Hindon and Minden may update their assessment roll

by KEITH SCHAEFER
Staff Reporter

The following matters were dealt with at the May 28 meeting of the Anson, Hindon and Minden council.

Assessment change

There may be a change in the way municipal taxes are assessed. Now, assessment charges are based on 1910 values. Obviously, times and values have changed said the councillors, and Vern Graham said they should be brought up to date. Graham said if a preliminary report shows the property values are assessed way out of line with the realities of the marketplace today, then things have been out of line a long time and need to be changed.

Property assessment is a political hot potato. Metro Toronto council has been operating on 1940 values, and the struggle to update the assessment rolls is a contentious issue that has threatened the very existence of the regional council. In Ottawa last year, some businesses in the downtown market were faced with assessment increases of almost 200 percent. And they only updated their rolls five years.

Noise issue

Council discussed the possibility of instituting a noise by-law for the municipality. Deputy Reeve Bern Berry, a former police officer, said that it is his experience that police want noise by-laws in place, because it gives them an excuse to look "for more serious matters". Questions were raised about how such a by-law could be enforced. The Soyars Lake residents had suggested that one be implemented. The present bylaw is considered inadequate by some people, Clerk Bev Millar said.

Road report

Clayton Cameron, the road superintendent for the municipality, gave a report on a week long course he took on roads and computers. He said he doesn't recommend Minden get another computer, because there isn't enough work for another one.

He said he is looking into buying a shredder for $70,000.

Diamond improvements

Kim Colliss made a presentation to council, asking for improvements to the lower ball diamond in town. Nothing has been done to it since it was built. Colliss wanted to have something temporary done to the outfield, so it wouldn't look like a dish, with the edges turned up. In the fall, something more permanent will have to be worked out, so the diamond can be in good shape for next year.

Colliss said that when the diamond was built, only two teams played there. Now 14 teams with over 170 players use the facility.

Washrooms are also needed for the diamond, he said. Many women play there now, and if tournaments are held, the players have nowhere to go to the bathroom. Reeve Nesbitt replied portable toilets have a history of being abused, so something more permanent may have to be discussed.

Beer garden

The Minden fair will once again have a Bavarian beer garden. Council approved a request by the agricultural society to obtain a liquor license for the event in August.

Fire agreement

Council renewed its firefighting agreement with Stanhope township for the acquisition of fire protection services. Minden will charge $250 for the first hour it is needed, and $125 for each subsequent hour.

Other business...

Charles Muli was given permission to put a trailer on his lot on the east side of Highway 35, on the condition he have a permanent structure within a year.

An application by Scott Harris was approved to put a mobile refreshment vehicle in Carnarvon.

The proposed site plan for Minden Hardware was approved in principle.

Municipal auditor Gary Thurston reviewed a "Reader's Digest condensed version" of the 1986 financial statement of the municipality.

Council officially banned smoking in the library. And lastly, Minden council was given a certificate by the ISDRA, the international sled dog racing association for the municipality's contribution to the sport.

For centuries, the pearl has been a mark of distinction, wealth and power. Pearls were treasured in China as early as 3000 B.C. and they are mentioned in the Talmud and the Bible. The pearl is the only gem that nature creates in the sea. Ranging in color from delicate rose white to black, all pearls are formed within the bodies of a few varieties of shellfish. Pearls symbolize health, vitality, truth and beauty. They are found principally in the Persian Gulf, Australia, the South Seas, Panama and Venezuela.

Spread of moth is relentless despite spraying programs

Small infestations occurred in southern Quebec in 1924 and in the maritimes in 1936, but they were eradicated. However, the moth got a firm foothold in Quebec in the 1960's. It later spread to eastern Ontario from upper New York State, and from Quebec the gypsy moth invaded New Brunswick and Nova Scotia in 1981. Outbreaks have also appeared in British Columbia.

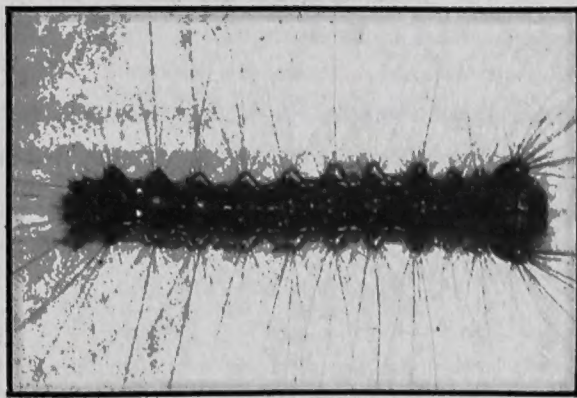

"In British Columbia, they were able to trace how the gypsy moth got out there down to one man. It seems a man in the army from Quebec went out there with some moth eggs attached to one of his knapsacks. The next year there was a big outbreak of the moth around the army base," Dolan says.

In Ontario, and indeed all of Canada, the Kaladar area has been the hardest hit by the moth. The problem there was first noticed in 1981, when 1000 hectares (1 hectare = 2.5 acres) were infested. They grew exponentially until 1985, when the forest area affected by the moth was almost 250,000 hectares.

In its native Eurasia, about 200 different species of parasites and predators to keep the gypsy moth in check, but here, there are approximately 43 of them, including flies and wasps. Since the gypsy moth has been noticed as a problem on the continent, the different governments have introduced 13 new parasites and one predator to North America dating back to 1905.

And it seems the exotic (foreign) parasites have become more important than native ones. MNR researchers have found that eight exotic parasites and the predator that were introduced have become common enough in Canada to be considered important. Only two native parasites fall in the same category. Another fly will be introduced to Canada soon. The Canadian forestry service sponsored research which identified the Cerantia smarensis (your guess is as good as mine) as a species that attacks young gypsy moth larvae fiercely enough to be worthwhile to bring to Canada.

These parasites and predators must be doing something right. Man is starting to win the battle...maybe. While there were 250,000 hectares infested with the moth in 1985, only 167,000 hectares were affected.

Gypsy moth caterpillar

"We are seeing a natural collapse of the population," says Dolan, "there were too many of them. And when the number of the prey go up, that means there is more food for the predators, so their numbers have gone up."

The Gypsy Moth Program for eastern Ontario has played a huge role in controlling the pest also. It is run by the Ministry of Natural Resources, and it is responsible for the concerted effort made during the past few years to keep the moth as much under control as possible. They have been spraying pesticide to kill the moth out of the Irvine Lake airstrip for two years. Dolan says spraying has made a difference.

"The spray program has been effective. Every year we fly over the infested areas we sprayed, and check defoliation. If there is zero to twenty percent defoliation, that is excellent. Twenty to forty five percent is satisfactory. Nothing else is acceptable. And most of the areas we spray are in the first two categories."

But spraying can only do so much. In the first place, the Gypsy Moth Program only sprays for about 25 hours a year, Dolan says. To understand why only a small time is available, one has to look at the life cycle of the moth.

A gypsy moth's life starts in late July or early August as an egg, and is deposited in a big egg mass that resembles chamois. The eggs hatch in late April or May. Small, copper coloured caterpillars come out and start to climb a tree, where they can feed on the emerging leaves. The caterpillars shed their skin five or six times by mid-June. Soon they are five or six centimetres long.

By July, the caterpillars are found in shady sheltered places where they pupate. They wrap themselves in a cocoon, and come out two weeks later as a moth. The adults are dark brown, and smaller than the beige females. The females can't fly. She lays her 1000 or so eggs close to where she pupates and the cycle starts over. There is only one set of eggs per year.

The caterpillars have to be sprayed after they shed their skin for the second or third time, when they are still small, and are still eating the leaves at the top of the trees. If the caterpillars are sprayed when they are larger, it will take a lot more pesticide to kill them—the poison would have to be stronger, which means it could kill other things too. And if spraying is delayed for any reason, the caterpillars may go below the top of the forest's canopy, and therefore not get all the pesticide.

All that leaves about six weeks in the year to spray. And no spraying can be done if the wind is too strong, because it would just blow the pesticide away. If the weather is too hot, it will evaporate so quickly that it won't do any good. So spraying is restricted to late evening and early mornings, when the wind is usually a bit lower, and the temperature is right.

Bacillus Thuringiensis (Bt) is the pesticide used. There was a problem with it this year that caused a delay in spraying, and one that worried the Haliburton county officials that were there. Bt has a streptococcal bacteria in it, that at first was thought to be at too high a level in the Bt. The government banned it for a week, until tests could be done. The levels found were not considered harmful.

Bt is considered a low risk pesticide. It has less toxicity than table salt.

"It doesn't interfere with mammals or fish—it has a low environmental impact. The pesticide is specific to moths that become butterflies. It's even licensed for residential area use—it's the only one," says Dolan.

The gypsy moth

Another pesticide that may come onto the market is NPV (nucleopolyhedrosis virus). It only attacks the gypsy moth, and also is safe to other insects, mammals and fish. NPV is only in experimental use in Canada right now, though it is used widely in the United States. Dolan says a company has to go through a lot of research and development to get a patent for a pesticide in Canada. Obviously, after spending all that money, the company would want to make a profit, and the market isn't big enough in Canada to warrant such an investment, he says.

Dolan adds that spraying is only done in areas where there is a problem; therefore they would not spray Haliburton as a form of preventative medicine. He says the Ministry of Natural Resources is watching the spread of the moth into our area by way of fly strips, that are scented like a female moth. Once a certain number of male moths stick to the fly strip, an egg mass survey is taken in the area. If eggs are found, that constitutes two life stages of the moth, which means it has finally arrived. As of yet, only one life stage has been found in our area.

"What we hope to do in the future," says Dolan, "is get an eventual natural cycle of the moth. We are not going to eradicate it; it will continue to spread. There will be some tree mortality, because the area hasn't seen the moth before. Eventually, the localized population will collapse, because it either runs out of food, or because of a slow build up of natural enemies, like viruses and parasites."

New retirement home planned for area

Plans are proceeding for a proposed retirement and convalescent home complex in the Haliburton area that could eventually accommodate as many as 150 people.

The complex would be built on an 11 acre site in Maple Hills estates recently purchased from Walter Thomas.

The first major hurdle to be overcome is a rezoning application which will be processed by Dysart et al as soon as all of the required documentation is received.

Planning official Jodi Ainsworth said the application is for rezoning from rural to a special institutional category. Notice of the proposed change will be circulated to all property owners within 400 feet of the former Thomas property, as regulations require.

Access to the property is over a private road, and it is expected that council would require the convalescent home developers, Bilgees Enterprises Inc., to bring it up to municipal standards to the property entrance, so that portion of the road could be assumed by the municipality.

Bilgees Enterprises Inc. currently operates three other retirement and convalescent home facilities. They are located in Tara near Owen Sound, Fergus, and Toronto.

The proposed Haliburton area facility would initially handle 75 to 85 residents, according to Walter Thomas, spokesman for Oliver

Johnson of Bilgees Enterprises Inc.

A second phase of expansion could see the facility enlarged to accommodate up to 150 people. One wing of the facility would be set up to care for Alzheimer's Disease patients. The developers also propose to construct a number of cabanas on the site, which could accommodate couples.

The developers have requested that a 'tee' be placed in the Kashagawigamog sewer line extension to be constructed this fall so the complex could be linked to the municipal sewage system.

Thomas says the developers hope to offer the public an opportunity to visit the site and discuss the proposal as it takes shape.

Board agrees with parents, keeps English course

A Grade 13 English course which had been slated for elimination next fall has been reinstated in the wake of an extensive lobbying campaign by parents and students. The course, with a projected enrolment of only five students, was one of several which HHSS principal Andy Hemphill had recommended for cancellation as he balanced the 41 teachers presently on staff with the number of course sections that could be offered.

Parents and students considered the Grade 13 English course a special case, however, and argued that it should be offered for at least one more year, despite the small class size.

Earl Sisson, spokesman for a delegation who attended last Tuesday's board meeting to discuss the issue with trustees, said parents were making "an emotional appeal" that the course be retained. "This would be the first time this English course has been dropped," Sisson said. The students choosing it will be in Grade 13 next year, and have been streaming their other credits toward it, he said.

"Our point is, this is a special case because its the last year of Grade 13," Sisson said. Addressing the issue of the cost of hiring another teacher to enable the course to be offered, Sisson noted that the board chose to keep the Dorset school open in the interests of students, a step which was "quite costly" compared with the salary of one teacher.

Trustee Cheryl Murdoch was the first to express support for the parents' views, but other trustees quickly agreed.

"In this situation, I feel that we have to support those five students"

Stanhope holds line on budget this year

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

Stanhope Township is joining other local municipalities in their claims that while the individual councils have kept their own budgets low, the mill rate will go up because of outside forces.

When taxpayers get their next bill in the mail, they will have to pay 8.3 percent more than they did last year, although the municipality's own increase is only one percent. The rest is due to increases demanded by the county and the Board of Education.

In general, comparing last year's mill rate to this year's, the increase for elementary schools is 1.8 percent, 19.3 percent for secondary schools, (meaning a combined average of 8.6 percent for education), 33.1 percent for the county and 1 percent for Stanhope's costs.

In the municipality's own budget, clerk-treasurer Gerald Bain says the biggest increase is in the transportation department. A grader was bought at the price of $140,000, part of which has to be paid next year. The 1986 transportation budget was $346,000 and it has increased to $409,000, mainly because of the grader.

Another major purchase is that of the mini-pumper for the fire department. Though it has yet to be finished, it will cost $62,000.

When you consider that the entire budget for the municipality is $751,253, not including reserves, the cost of the grader and mini-pumper is putting quite a dent in the available funds. In capital costs alone, they account for 27 percent of the budget and that "almost curtails any more capital work," says Bain.

"It's a beautiful budget as far as I'm concerned as the tax collector," he adds. "It isn't hard to justify a one percent increase."

A cop out

There was some good news and some bad news on the smoking front at last Tuesday's Haliburton County Board of Education meeting. The good news is that the board has decided all its buildings must be smoke free by September of next year. The decision stems from recommendations of the joint liaison committee of trustees, teachers and CUPE representatives, who agreed early in May that smoking should be eliminated in schools. The bad news is that the board stopped short of the crucial step of banning smoking on school property, which means that secondary school students can continue to puff away, entrenching with each cigarette an addiction whose long term consequences are by now so well known.

Anyone who thinks about this decision for even a moment cannot fail to detect in it a glaring irony. On the one hand the board has clearly recognized that smoking is a destructive and socially unacceptable practice, and that second hand smoke in the workplace can harm not only workers but students who may be exposed to it. On the other hand the board is giving high school students every opportunity to begin the destructive process at an early age and with the board's silent blessing. Trustees may not see it that way, but they would have a hard time denying that the presence of a smoking area on school property encourages young people to smoke as a way of being 'grown up' and accepted by certain of their peers. Studies have shown that young women are smoking in ever larger numbers, and even a casual glance at the smoking area at HHSS shows that many of the students who use it are girls in the junior grades.

Clearly the board cannot justify its reluctance to ban smoking by students on the grounds of health. If it's unhealthy for teachers and other employees, it can hardly be less so for students. Why then has the board chosen to let students smoke? The answer is that the administration doesn't want to deal with the discipline problems it thinks would result from a total smoking ban. Better to let students smoke than to make a rule that says they can't and put some effort into enforcing it.

This is simply a cop out, and it should not go unprotested by parents who care about the welfare of students. Smoking has been banned on school properties at other times and in other settings without undue strain on the people paid to enforce discipline. There will always be students who flout rules, but the vast majority would find a smoking restriction no hardship. And there are few more powerful tools for influencing the behaviour of young people than pressure from their peers. The signs are everywhere that smoking by adults is declining. The board should encourage that trend by setting an example for young people. They are taught about the perils of smoking in public schools, but once in high school, efforts to communicate that message again in health courses are thwarted by the presence of a smoking area, and board seems to think that's just fine.

Smoke free in 1988 is an admirable objective, but its only half an effort if the ban doesn't extend to students as well.

Welcome news

The local ambulance services got an important shot in the arm last week with the announcement of an additional $260,000 in funding from Ontario's Ministry of Health. The funds will enable six more full-time attendants to be hired, enhancing the services in Haliburton and Minden and taking some of the pressure of managers and their part-time staff.

Both communities have benefitted from a steadily improving service staffed mainly by volunteers who backed up the full time staff and made 24 hour a day, seven day a week coverage possible. While these volunteers have shown a high degree of commitment to the ambulance service and through it, to their communities, the job was growing too large as the area they served continued to attract larger numbers of residents and visitors.

Volunteers will continue to play a key role in the local ambulance services, but the new funding will ensure that the service is adequately staffed to meet the area's needs. The funding increase is indeed welcome news.

Time to get ready for more seniors

from Echo readers

To The Editor:

June marks Senior Citizen month. The welfare of those 65 years and over is receiving more and more attention. Haliburton has its share of this age group as many couples find it an ideal place for retirement. The loss of a spouse is tragic but it has become common procedure for the one remaining to continue living in the family home. If good health allows, this is the best arrangement. However, a frequent problem that crops up is that of transportation. The husband has usually done all the driving. If he goes there sits the car in the garage with no one to drive it. In the cities there are buses and public transport. Here in Haliburton a non-driving senior must rely on the good nature of others for grocery pick up. I know that walking is good for one but many find their feet complaining and carrying a bag containing three liters of milk or perhaps a bag of potatoes is just too much.

A recent article in the Toronto Star tells of enthusiasm shown by seniors in a driver's refresher course. A similar course for our Haliburton members would add greatly to their independence. They would have no wish to drive on the 401 but just the experience to take them to the Club, the Church, library or medical centre. They would also have no need to worry about the annual driver's test that is necessary at the age of 80.

Let us look ahead and prepare our senior citizens. Teach them to master the family car and so retain their independence as well as their home.

Winnie Schofield,
Wilberforce.

A good cause

To the Editor:

On Saturday June 6, the residents and visitors in Haliburton County will have an opportunity to help provide clean drinking water to villages in India and Africa by getting involved in the Walk for Water. The Highland Pipe Band will lead off from the Zion United Church in Carnarvon at 9:00 a.m. We'll be walking. Can you?

Our recent trip to Nicaragua will remain for us a very memorable experience.

For several days we helped Nicaraguan villagers build their own houses. Each villager contributed his own labour and pays for the cost of material—about $350. This may seem like a very low price tag, but the average wage in Nicaragua is $1 per day.

We were volunteers for "Habitat for Humanity" which provided additional labour and equipment used in house building.

It was refreshing for us to help in this way. We were in a country that is in the news daily, usually with reports of destruction and death. Working with people in the same spirit as giving your own next door neighbour a hand with a difficult task makes the politics of power and terror seem such a waste of time.

Fortunately there are many individuals and groups from Canada, Europe and the U.S.A. who are working in various development projects. CARE of Canada is providing water pipelines and wells in remote villages.

We were surprised by the pride and responsibility people take for their water systems. For example a large water storage tank fed by a pipeline from a distant spring was made into a small oasis. All around was dried ground and wizened trees, but here the overflow water was used to irrigate a small group of papaya trees and sugar cane, with the area fenced to keep out cattle and pigs who might pollute the water and eat the plants.

HAVE is considering a joint project in Nicaragua with CARE to provide water to a village that is also organizing itself for new housing.

What is for the future? June 6 is fast approaching. Can you join us?

Gerry Feltham, David Phillips,
Haliburton, Ontario.

During the last two or three weeks local business people have been saying that business seems to be down from previous years at this same time. This seems to be a bit of a mystery when you consider the fact that the economy all over Ontario is booming and that everyone who wants to work in Haliburton County is employed. New commercial buildings are going up in the village of Haliburton in particular at a record rate and new houses are popping up all over the area. A local business person told me this week that they believe that juggling the dates on some of the major holiday weekends is hurting business. For instance who are we really trying to fool? The 24th of May this year fell on a Sunday so the Victoria Day holiday weekend should have been held on May 22, 23 and 24, and Monday would have been a holiday also. But what happened? The holiday weekend was held the week previous. I'd like someone to explain this to me. When Dominion Day comes along it will be held on the day it falls on and this year it will be on a Wednesday. Yes July 1 this year is on a Wednesday and it will be celebrated on this date not on a Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday or Sunday.

Haliburton County resident Bill Hamilton was introduced into the Oshawa Sports Hall of Fame on May 27, along with his former cycling partner Lance Pugh. Hamilton is a former Olympic Cyclist who took part in the British Empire Games and the Olympics. A hobby farmer, Hamilton is the owner of the business known as Haliburton Office Equipment.

Just a reminder that the Home and Vacation Show now in its ninth year will be held at the Haliburton Arena on June 12, 13 and 14. It is being sponsored this year by the Haliburton Curling Club.

The Scenic Highway 35 Association is very active these days. The Association has gone to two tourism shows in the United States, the Sportsman's Show in Toronto and another at the Eaton Centre. The association travels to the shows with the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce.

Here are some leftover notes. Mrs. Bert Boun-sall of Haliburton was telling us that she visited with Bruce and Marion Henry at the Hasting Manor near Belleville recently. She said that Marion was overjoyed to see her. The bulldozers were at work on Haliburton's main street again last week when the excavation got underway for the foundation for the new two storey Dawson, Gray, Dart Building on the location of the former Halco building. Just Plain Country with Janne and Rob from Haliburton provided entertainment during an evening of country music in Lindsay recently. Excavation work is also started for an addition to the Village Shoppe store.

Earle Casey dropped into the office on Friday and presented me with a newspaper, The Canadian Post, Lindsay, Ontario, which was dated Friday April 5, 1895. Earle was telling me that when they were making the renovations recently at Birch Point Lodge they discovered this old newspaper behind a mirror in a dresser which apparently was part of a bedroom suite which was owned by Jean Casey's grandmother, Mrs. Robert Gould. She received it when she was married and that was a long time ago. Earle took the dresser to Doug Eastman at Ingoldsbay and he did a marvellous job in refinishing it and the dresser is now part of Jean and Earle's bedroom. Earle also told me that he was taking the old newspaper down to Terry Blair at County Commercial Printers in Haliburton to have a finish put on it so that the newspapers could be kept in good condition for years to come. The newspaper of that day had some very interesting news items and the prices in the advertisements would really surprise you. In an article under the heading Almost A Fire in Minden we quote the following information. "On Friday night last the front shop of the Echo building in Minden caught fire from a door in the partition swinging back against the stove. Fortunately, Mr. A. Clarke, of Fenelon Falls, who had been busy up until the late hour, noticed a light in the store as he was about retiring to his bed and he and Mrs. Greene rushed down and burst in the front door, and with the contents of a water tub standing in the shop they soon had the fire extinguished, but in a few minutes more the entire building would have been destroyed."

Keep in mind that the Haliburton County Fair Beef Barbecue and Dance will be held on Saturday June 6 at the Minden Community Centre (ice surface). Dinner and dance $10 per person, dance only $4 per person, dinner only $7 per person. Music is being supplied by "Detour".

Speaking on the subject of old documents John S. Hulbig of R.R.1, Kinmount, Ontario sends along some very interesting information. One note issued by the Sterling Bank of Minden, shows that this bank was doing business in Minden in 1908. John has supplied another receipt in which he exchanged a subscription to the Echo for a year for a quantity of wood. The Minden Echo's first edition was printed on August 21, 1884 by Brown and Small. Mr. Delamere purchased the Echo around 1890 and continued printing it for twenty years. He was a Sunday School superintendent for many years. The newspaper is known as the Haliburton County Echo.

POINTS OF VIEW

Playing hooky in springtime

The View From Here

Harvey Clarke

MY ROLE as correspondent for CKCO-TV gave me an interesting trip to Kitchener and the TV station a week or two back. It was a fascinating trip in a number of ways.

I had a chance to meet all the on-screen people who read my Haliburton stories, and the off-screen people I deal with to get them on the air. I also got to meet and compare notes with Del Archer of CTV News, who has been in broadcasting almost as long as I have. Turns out we have a number of mutual friends.

But what made the trip more interesting was the memories. I went to high school in Kitchener, and had the time to drive in down the main drag and see how it has changed over the years.

And because it was such a beautiful, sunny, spring-into-summer day I almost wished I didn't have to spend it indoors. I wanted to 'play hooky.' And that reminded me of the last time I did...

To be honest, it was also only the second or third time I ever did. I enjoyed school most of the time, and you certainly lived in fear of the penalties for being caught in those days.

But this one bright and sunny day, too many years ago, a bunch of us sat around during lunch and lamented being indoors on what was definitely an outdoor type of day. Several of us had double spare 'study' periods, with just one real class to be taken the rest of the afternoon.

Since I worked 'after four' (as we called it then) and Saturdays, it never made much sense to play hooky, anyhow, because I had to be at work at 4:30. (I think it was at Loblaw's that particular year).

Everyone agreed that the thing to do was to take a 'bike hike,' a ride out into the country that would have been a hike if you didn't have a bike. The everyone included a quiet but rather attractive redhead that I had admired but never really had a chance to talk to very often.

Jean also worked outside of school hours, because her family owned a restaurant downtown. All the kids pitched in, and Jean was a waitress. If you went to see her on the job, she never seemed to have time to visit with you because she was so busy — or maybe it was her mama's watchful eye.

But when I brought up the problem of having to be back on time for work, most of them decided they didn't want to be that restricted, and started talking about other ways to spend their time.

Then Jean said to me "I'd like to take a ride, but I'd have to be back on time too."

I'm not too sure exactly what I said, but I did allow that I'd be pleased to take a trip with her, short enough to get us both to work on time — except for the fact that I hadn't been brought up around there, and had no idea of where you could go.

Well, it turned out that she knew of a very nice woods within an hour's ride, with good trails through it and a very nice stream. And before I knew it, there I was with the girl of my dreams — well one of them, anyhow — pumping along in front of me, leading me on to who knows where...

This was a fairly athletic type of gal, on the small side, but well put together. She had the typical fair skin that went with the red hair, and a lot of rather attractive (to me, at least) freckles.

I had an old-fashioned double-bar bike with a carrier in the front, left over from delivery days, and I had to work hard to keep up to her. I know I had worked up a pretty good sweat in the warm sun by the time we got there, and she was perspiring a bit, too.

I can't remember who suggested going down by the stream to splash cool water on our faces, but we left our bikes by a fence and slipped down beside an old bridge and cooled ourselves off.

We sat and listened to the stream, which was four or five feet wide, and rushing along pretty well, though it looked pretty shallow. Not exactly a babbling brook, but a very nice setting.

I spread out a windbreaker I had had tied around my waist by the sleeves, so she could lie back and look at the clouds without getting grass stains on her blouse, and for a while we compared what we thought the various cloud formations looked like.

It was all very intimate, and I kind of felt I could maybe lean over and steal a small kiss while she was lying back, looking up. I figured she could see what was coming and move if she wanted to. So I did lean over to kiss her...and she just stayed there and closed her eyes.

I kissed her a couple of more times, and a lot of thoughts were going through my mind, I must admit. Or at least they were, until she suddenly grabbed me by the arms and sat bolt upright — wide-eyed!

There on the opposite side of the creek — staring at us with big, brown eyes — stood five or six jersey cows, chewing silently. It certainly broke the mood. Maybe they reminded Jean of her mother's watchful ways.

We were back on our bikes, heading home in seconds, it seems, and I never really got to take her out again.

But I still remember that warm spring day and that 'bike hike,' and those damn cows...

The Hughes' are a special breed

Sunny Side Up

Martha Perkins

TALKING to the Hughes family, it was impossible not to get the impression that something was out of joint. It wasn't what they were telling me which I found different, it was that they were talking about the present, not the past. Up until then, I was accustomed to hearing stories about a way of life which demanded a lot of hard work, but everyone who was telling me these stories was older than 70. The Hughes were describing their lifestyle in the same way the oldtimers described life in the first part of this century, with a few modernizations of course.

The Hughes family—Charles, Evonne and their six sons—may use tractors instead of horses to till their land, but they still grow all their own food; they may have access to furnaces, but they heat their home with wood; the boys' friends may talk about what they saw on t.v. last night, but the boys probably spent their time fishing in the river or doing their chores. The trappings of their life are all modern, but they way they choose to live it harks back to the way things used to be.

The Hughes family shouldn't be used as an example to every urban family who thinks they should sell off their belongings, buy a farm and boycott grocery stores. Some people tried to do that before and the results were disastrous when expectations did not match with reality. The Hughes are deeply committed to their way of life and it's not just some passing fancy for them. Other people would have to gradually adopt their lifestyle, making decisions along the way when they find out exactly what it entails.

Before, people lived the way the Hughes do, not because they chose to do so, but because their circumstances left them no other options. The older people I've talked to knew no other way of life and yet looking back, don't seem to regret any of it. They enjoy the amenities technology has to offer but they don't miss some of the side-effects of this modernization.

It is because the Hughes family wants to put their philosophy and beliefs to practice that they live the way they do. The six boys must feel a bit isolated at times but now some of them are finding their friends would rather be driving the tractor with them instead of sitting at home watching television. They seem pretty content with the way things are.

I don't know whether I ever would, or could, live the same way as the Hughes do. However, while I don't grow my own food, I like to bake all my own bread and make my meals from scratch; I enjoy the things we can learn from nature and appreciate the seclusion the Highlands has to offer. Gradually, I may become more self-sufficient as I learn how to do more things. Until then, it's just interesting to see how one family can put their beliefs to work.

Headlines gleaned at the checkout

Northern Lights

Virginia Muenzel

IT'S A GOOD thing that grocery shopping is so educational. Otherwise, waiting in those long summer lines might be totally insufferable. We learn many facts while shopping, however. Facts that may or may not serve us in later life. For instance, we learn that no matter what time of what day we shop, the truck carrying all the specials will be pulling in just about the time we're pulling out. We learn that the tourists believe that the grocers hike their prices up just before Victoria Day. We also learn that there's no way you can shop quickly in a small town, what with all the stopping to chat you do. But that's okay. It makes the whole thing very relaxing.

Until we get to those lines. Where the kids are whining, and the guy behind you accidentally shoves the cart into the back of your ankle. A new aisle opens up and six people want to be first. The kid in the cart ahead of you tosses his empty drinking box at you, and begins screaming for a candy bar. An all around friendly crowd.

But good old Mike decided we out to have some distraction to keep us from losing our perspective (along with our sanity and our tempers) while we wait it out. He gave us some reading material. Well, he didn't actually give it to us. It just sort of sits there, attempting to pique our curiosity with mind boggling headlines like SWORD SWALLOWER HICCUPS & DIES WHILE ON STAGE and MAX HEADROOM TO RUN FOR U.S. PRESIDENT? If that doesn't grab your interest, check this out. LOVING COUPLE GET FACE LIFTS TO LOOK LIKE TWINS or INCREDIBLE DOG HEALS SICK PEOPLE BY LICKING THEM. But the one that finally made me buy the paper was HOW YOU CAN EAT EVERY HOUR & STILL LOSE

POUNDS.

This is only the Sun. If you really want to get into it you buy the National Enquirer. They've got all the latest dope on who is romping with whom. How Dallas and Dynasty will end, and who won't be back next year.

Fortunately I hate soaps, especially night time soaps. Consequently I have no urge to be in on how they're going to do away with Bobby this year. On the other hand, after a hard day of shopping, my sick sense of humour gets tickled when it reads WIFE FEEDS HUSBY BIRTH CONTROLS PILLS TO SOP HIM CHEATING, or CREMATORIUM BURNS UP TORCHING 600 POUND CORPSE.

At least it puts me in a humorous frame of mind before I get the bad news about the cost of my groceries. So I bought the silly rage. (That's what they call this kind of paper if you care.) After all, I had to learn the answer to the $6.40 question which is...Do the stores have anything to do with the headlines?

I doubt that anyone really wants to know what happens when you hiccup with a sword halfway down your throat. Hopefully none of us will ever be faced with the problem. As for MAX being president, that's just the fantasy of some British political analyst who claims, "He would have a definite advantage. He wouldn't forget anything it would all be in his computer bank". (This guy ought to talk to Martha Perkins.)

Now, dear Harold and Fran Finster just wanted to do something special on their silver wedding anniversary as a sign of their undying love for each other. "This way," says Harry, "When one of us dies a part of us will live on in the other person." (Sort of makes you want to gag, doesn't it?) "I think it's a lovely gesture" said the plastic surgeon. (I'll just bet he does!)

The dog story is a little hokey. But I suppose anything is possible. And, the eat all day diet probably works if you have time to prepare food all day long. In very small doses, of course. But if you're a guy who has been cheating on his wife, I'd start checking out the hamburgers. As the poor betrayed Emily said, "I got the dog to take his heartworm pills that way so I figured what worked on Fido would work on Alfred." It seems Alfred's libido was diminished, so to speak.

I'll bet you're just dying to hear about the corpse. I hardly know how to tell you delicately that this really big corpse wouldn't cremate, so the crematorium manager Singh (get it) Rumala, of India turned up the heat. Said Singh, after his crematorium was in ashes, "It was a challenge I should never have accepted."

And, as if that weren't enough, did you know that sleeping in a waterbed can give you heartburn?

Development can bring lethargy

AS OTHERS SEE IT

by Bob Giuliano

ALTHOUGH it had only been a few weeks since being in Haliburton, it seemed like everything had changed. At the end of March snow was still piled high in the yard and the lake was solid ice. I love the majesty of winter here. Now, only six weeks later the snow is gone and the lake ripples ly municipal park created I believe in part by one of the good service clubs in the district.

Unfortunately, both my children suffered accidents in the same place on the large play superstructure. The same day we saw another parents child have the same accident.

The problem is between the upper and middle platforms leading to the tunnel slide. The platforms butt against the square post.

When a child attempts to climb down from the upper platform his feet tend to swing into the space under the upper platform. When he lowers himself, his feet miss the lower platform and he ends up landing on the back of his/her back, or on the face and upper body on the lower platform then further to the ground. (Depending on how the child descends.)

In the many, many playgrounds we visit (as we travel in our profession and bring our kids) these type of spaces are frequently covered with "sailor" mesh rope, which also provides an additional climbing activity or platform edges overlap.

I write this only to prevent this accident from recurring.

blue. The loons are back and so are the black flies. Sunny days kept me at the spring chores around the place.

In a way we couldn't relax. The city, the job, the struggle for life's truth kept us preoccupied along with the eavestroughs which the ice tore off, the heaved porch from the frost, the dirty windows from roosting spring birds, the cantankerous impeller on the septic pump—all waiting attention and fixing. Tired from the city, we just puttered at the tasks and slept.

Haliburton has changed in more ways than the season. There is an 'angst', an anxiety and frustration among friends here that saddens. Haliburton is "developing". With development comes new optimism, mostly economic. Also with development there is loss and mourning about what is a part of the dead past: small town folk and life. Also with development relationships shift to another order, the personal and spontaneous pales; "opportunity" and busyness prevails.

Listen to some of what I listened to this wee: The West Guilford Dump was burning again. There were questions about who set the fire. Waste disposal is a big problem and land fill sights are shrinking. Maybe having a "fire" is the only way, now and then, even if it endangers the nearby forest and pollutes the air. What are we going to do with all that garbage?

Sir Sandford is expanding and Chace is out with no place to go. On top of that, already feeling as though moms and kids don't count (a phenomenon of "development") a thoughtless letter appeared in the Echo from an ill informed writer cutting Chace to pieces. When I heard this, poor Len Pizzezy was being attacked by frustrated and hurt Chace people for allowing the letter to make print.

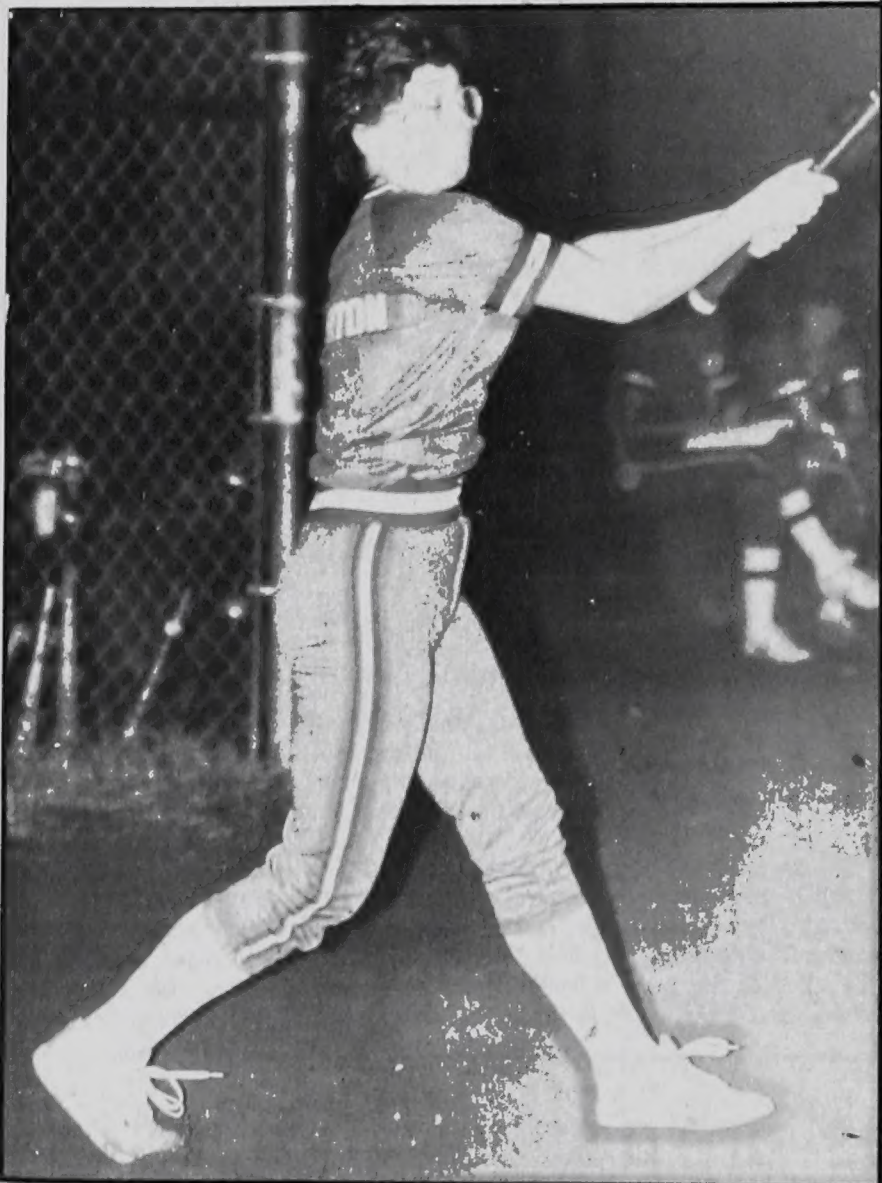

Several programs designed to get government funding are floundering. ("Development" is when outside funds, usually government, stimulate activity that create a need). New and optimistic building projects started last year aren't finished while newer building plans are getting underway. ("Develop-

Minden Rally a smashing success

Kim McCracken takes a swing at a pitch.

by KEITH SCHAEFER
Staff Reporter

And they're off!

A record number of cars took off from the Rockliffe hotel in Minden Saturday, as the seventh annual Black Bear Road Rally got underway. Thirty-three drivers and co-drivers pushed their cars to the limit over some of the roughest MNR roads in the area.

For the two dozen or so spectators and amateur photographers present, the cars put on quite a show. There were burnouts, skids, and even a few crashes.

The rally consisted of six stages. Each car went through the stages paced one minute apart, and they raced against the clock. The race is not continuous; the drivers complete one section, then drive on normal roads to another. Whoever completes the sections in the shortest amount of time wins.

The Minden rally is only one in a series of rallies held across the country all year. The winners get points for placing, and that goes toward the overall standings. There is a provincial, national and North American trophy.

Dave and Charlie Paisley took an 'S' curve too fast on the Sherborne Lake access road. They rolled once, then went nose over trunk and landed upside down on some rocks. Neither man was hurt, but Charlie complained of a "wee bit of a headache."

Twirler does well

Kim Smith, aged 12, of Minden, a member of the Haliburton County Hylites, entered her first solo baton twirling competition in Toronto on Saturday May 9.

She placed fourth in Beginner Solo, 12-14 years. She is coached by Brenda Cooper of Haliburton.

Haliburton Juniors show their stuff

by KEITH SCHAEFER
Staff Reporter

Miriam Smith sent the first pitch to the Haliburton Juniors softball game last Wednesday night in to deep centre field for an inside the park home run, as the Juniors went on to defeat West Guilford 18-14.

Smith and four other Juniors had three hits apiece, and Melissa Creelman went four for five in the 24 hit barrage.

The Juniors showed why they have been league champions for the last three years. They only committed three errors, all on infield grounders.

Diane Kearns started pitching for the Juniors, but had some control problems in the second inning. West Guilford loaded the bases, and then two singles brought in three runs. She walked another batter to load the bases, and walked in two runs. The Juniors were actually down 11-7 after one and a half innings.

Haliburton replied with five runs in the bottom of the second, and were ahead to stay. On one play, Smith made a perfect bunt down the first base line. The West Guilford catcher ran to get the ball, instead of the pitcher, which allowed the runner at third to score.

Debbie Atkins came to pitch late in the second. In the third, Atkins was incredible. She struck the first three batters out. Boom, boom, boom. This girl can pitch.

Atkins added to her own cause in the bottom of the third, with a solo inside the park homer. She can hit, too.

She didn't let anybody get past first base after the third inning, and faced the minimum number of batters in the fourth, fifth and sixth innings. Her outfield gave her a lot of support, catching some difficult fly balls, and the shortstop made a good throw to first.

Haliburton scored two unearned runs in the fourth, thanks to three West Guilford errors. Three more runs in the sixth inning rounded out the scoring.

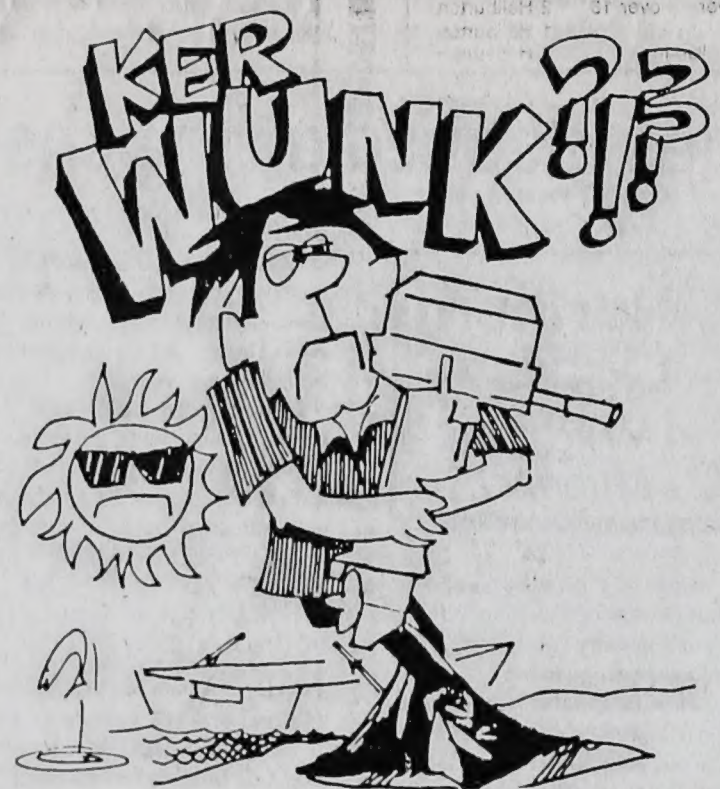

Coach Steve Smith said his team improved over the first game. "Things gelled this game. We had better hitting, though it was a slower pitcher. They just made a lot of heads up plays—they were more conscious of where the other players were."

There was a problem finding an umpire for the game last night. Coach Smith said that for some reason, people don't want to ump girls games.

NOTES—Debbie Atkins is the regular pitcher, but Kearns started because Atkins arm was sore... where were the fans for this game? Alf and I were the only ones to stay to the end... these girls hit just as good as the boys do, and they certainly field better...even though the coach umpired, it wasn't a biased game...he made a lot of terrible calls for both teams!...Cheryl Cooper was almost killed when Debbie Barry, her West Guilford teammate, just missed her with a foul ball...next Junior game is tonight.

The starter of the race takes the flag off the windshield of John Lutterberger's car. Lutterberger has raced all over North America, and was one of the favourites. Final results were not made available to the Echo.

Minden outscores Haliburton Srs. as ladies softball season starts

The Haliburton County Ladies Softball League got underway on Monday May 25 with the Haliburton Seniors and Irondale playing their home openers. The home field advantage did not prevail as both teams went down in defeat. Haliburton Seniors were beaten by Minden in a close 21-15 decision. Haliburton Seniors were lead by Kim Roberts who hit two home runs.

Irondale was beaten by the defending league champions Haliburton Juniors, 12-4. Tracey Harrison had a great night at bat for the Juniors and Laura had a good night on the mound for Irondale.

On Wednesday night in the fog, of the Haliburton ball field West Guilford and the Haliburton

Juniors played a closely matched game. Haliburton Juniors came out on top 18-14. It was in the first two innings that most of the runs were scored. After two complete innings it was 12-12. Debbie Adkins came in to relief pitch for the Juniors, and also hit a home run in the top of the third that proved to be the winning run for Haliburton. The West Guilford team had a good all round team effort, with Cheryl Cooper leading the team both on the field and on the bench.

Also on Wednesday night Haliburton Seniors travelled to Gooderham. Gooderham came out on top 13-11.

Minnesota Fats. Jim Crawford. Fast Eddie. Wait a minute...who was that second guy you said? Jim Crawford? Crawford, of 12 Mile Lake, won the Molson-Beaconbrook pool trophy on Saturday afternoon. He beat out Hugo Hurley three games to one in a best of five final. The tournament, involving 11 men, started early in March. Beaconbrook owner Bob Buckley said he will probably have a tournament again next year. From left to right, Hugo Hurley, Herb Baker, organizer, Jim Crawford and Bob Buckley.

Eakins writes to NHL president

Ontario's tourism and recreation minister has urged the National Hockey League to reduce violence and improve safety conditions in its games.

John Eakins expressed his concerns about hockey violence in a letter to NHL president John Zeigler.

"I am sure thousands of viewers continue to be amazed and frustrated by the repeated examples of violence and intimidation being brought to the television screen and the leniency with which they seem to be dealt with by your league and its officials," Eakins said in his letter to Zeigler.

Eakins urged Zeigler "to take strong action to clean up professional hockey and the image it projects... to all our young players."

Eakins said recent incidents during the playoff series indicate that something must be done to reduce the level of violence in hockey. He said he is particularly concerned about the number of fights and aggressive stickwork in NHL games, and the effect that kind of play may have on the thousands of minor and junior hockey players who watch NHL hockey on television.

Eakins has no jurisdiction over the NHL, but he has urged Zeigler to support recent provincial government initiatives to reduce violence and improve safety conditions in amateur sports.

New people needed for hockey exec.

The Haliburton minor hockey association held an executive meeting on Monday May 25. President Gary Brohman said they mainly dealt with housekeeping chores, such as getting in the team uniforms. He said new banners had been put up in the arena by Don Lloyd, showing all the champions and finalists in all-Ontario play. This past year, the midget team from Haliburton reached the Ontario finals.

Brohman said he is hoping to get some new people in the executive this year, but as yet, no one has stepped forward. He added that there is usually two new faces on the executive each year.

The annual meeting will be held June 25, when the financial statement will also be given out. For more details contact Gary Brohman.

Computer saves time for water managers

Trent Severn flows determined by a system that minimizes lake fluctuations height of the river and its flow. In other words, they can figure out that if the river is "x" centimetres deep, the flow is "y" cubic metres of water per second. Kitchen's sheet is just the graph that shows this relationship.

The measuring stations are checked every year to make sure the ice hasn't raised or lowered them, making the readings false. The bottom of the gauges are also checked, to see if the water bed has become higher, making the river more shallow. A change in the depth of the river means a whole new relationship between depth and flow. During the freshet, a fast run of water can dump a lot of gravel on the river bed, knocking the gauge out of whack.

"Gelert on the Burnt River is like that; it has to be re-metered every year," said Kitchen. "The large flow in the spring dislodges the gauge."

Kitchen only has to feed the water levels and the runs of this week and last week into the computer, and where he wants the lake levels to be in two weeks time. The computer tells him what the run should be at each dam to get the lakes at an even and high percentage of storage capacity. Unfortunately, it's not all that simple to understand.

Many variables

If the Haliburton lakes flowed in a single line down to the Trent it would be that simple. But each of the two main water feeds from our area that go into the Trent have a couple branches of their own. The average flow for each branch has to be figured out, so that between them, they don't flood out the lake they both are feeding.

Both Kushog and Eagle lakes flow into Boshkung. The flow for each of the two feeds have to be calculated when coming into Boshkung to make sure it doesn't flood with too much water. Eagle Lake is in turn fed by two lakes; the process goes on again.

The computer program knows by the numbering system of the lakes which ones drain where. It can figure out, and knows, what the runs of each set of branches are.

The computer has to know the inflow, outflow, change in storage of the lake and how much water can be expected to come in through rain, or from ground water for its calculations.

Confused yet?

The inflow and the outflow are easy to determine—the flow of the dams coming into and leaving the lake. These are measured in cubic metres of water that flow over the dams each second. The change in storage of the lake can be an inflow or natural inflow will be over the next week (or close to it). From that, it can calculate how much water is needed from the reservoir lakes to reach the desired levels on the canal.

Now, the computer knows the level of the reservoir lakes, how much water is needed for the Kawarthas, what the natural inflow of the reservoir lakes will be over the next week (or close to it) and it knows it has to bring the lakes down in equal percentages. Taking all this into account, it calculates the flow necessary at each lake in the reservoir lakes to meet these requirements.

While this may sound like an exact scientific procedure, one very unpredictable factor must still be an outflow, depending on if the lake went up or down, respectively. The difference between the inflow and the outflow is what the effect of the watershed of that branch of water had on the lakes, i.e. did more water rain down than was evaporated? Either rain or whether ground water was gained or lost is the watershed's effect.

The computer knows the level of the reservoir lakes, and how much water is needed for the Kawarthas. Taking all this into account, the computer calculates the flow of each dam.

Kitchen has these numbers in front of him from last week's run of the program. So except for the ground water/rain part, he just punches these figures into the computer.

The computer knows the water level of the Kawarthas, and knows what level is desired, and what the guessed at: the weather. Kitchen has to tell the computer how much moisture to expect in the coming week from natural causes. If there is going to be a lot of rain, the computer won't put the flows so high to get the desired lake levels. On the other hand, if it is going to be a dry week, flows would have to be increased.

Again, Kitchen has the number that tells him how much water came into the branch (on a per kilometre square basis) through ground water and rain in front of him from last week's program.

"I usually take anywhere from 50 to 90 percent of last week's reading for this week," said Kitchen.

Dams on area lakes can be dangerous places to play

by KEITH SCHAEFER
Staff Reporter

THE 40 DAMS Mike Jamieson and the rest of the Parks Canada men have to work with are at the top end of a water system, which drains down into the Trent canal at Balsam and Cameron lakes. Because of this, the dams in the area aren't nearly as big as some of the dams on the Waterway system. Only two dams in the Haliburton region have two sluiceways—all the rest have one. In comparison, Trenton has 18 sluiceways.

But the dams are still dangerous, says Mike Jamieson, area manager for the Trent-Severn-Waterway.

"People just don't realize how dangerous a dam is, or how dangerous it is for us to work with one," he says. "I go to cottage associations meetings, and people tell me that they jump into a dam, and that the current takes them away so fast, they don't go very deep. They actually tell me this. In the summer, they could land in a boil and be in big trouble."

Jamieson goes around to as many associations as he can, showing a grizzly film called "The Drowning Machine". It has actual television footage of what can happen once you land in a boil. It is not a pretty sight to have to sit through.

"I've seen it plenty of times, and I tell you it still makes me queasy. And it does have an effect on the cottagers," Jamieson says.

Dams on the Trent, by Peterborough for instance, have water flows of up to 450 cubic metres per second. At Minden, a heavy flow is 40 cubic metres per second. But that can still be enough to pull even a strong canoeist into a dam.

Low head dams are dangerous because you can't get out of them, no matter how good a swimmer you are. As the water flows over the dam, the force of the current pushes the water down to the bottom of the river, and then out from the dam. The water may finally come back to the surface five metres away from the dam. Some of the water just flows downstream, but some flows back to the dam, to fill the vacuum of water resulting from the dam water

"depending on what the weather forecast is. I bump the numbers down almost every week. There is a decline in the amount of moisture every week. During the summer, the trend is overwhelmingly down."

When Kitchen knocks this number down, he is telling the computer that less moisture will be coming into the system through natural causes, so the computer will put the run a bit higher.

Nature's role

Natural effects play an important role in water management. This was a dry spring, and four-five weeks ago, the Waterway was drawing heavily from the Haliburton area. About three weeks ago, it started to rain. While lake levels here have not gone up substantially, the Kawartha are overfull. Kitchen said they will soon be flooding. As a result of all the rain, no water has been drawn from the Highlands in three weeks, and it will be at least another week before any drawing is started. Even if it turned sunny and hot and dry tomorrow, there for Monday.

The program is only run for the reservoir systems in the Waterway, and even then it is only run in the summer. In spring and fall, Kitchen and Jamieson aim for a certain percentage of storage capacity in the lakes (about 40 percent in the fall, 95 percent in the spring). In winter, the lake levels don't change.

There are some hard and fast rules for the system, and a few things that are unique to the Haliburton area. One rule is that all the lakes have the same percentage of storage capacity. If one lake is 75 percent full, another lake is 75 percent full.

That is, unless the cottagers association wants it lower. If one lake asks the Waterway to only fill their lake to 90 percent in the spring to avoid flooding, their lake will be at 90 percent of what other lakes are all summer.

"If we don't continue the practise of leaving 10 percent less all summer, it's not fair. I don't think (the cottagers) like it, but I don't think it's fair the other way. You can't have your cake and eat it too," said Kitchen.

Saving water

Water only moves so fast. That's why when water is flooding, it can't be gotten rid of immediately. Kitchen is loathe to get rid of water in the first place, because he knows he is going to need it later, when the weather dries up. Once the decision is made to take some logs away and increase the flow, it can't be done all at once. It would sit in a lake downstream and flood those cottages before it went to the next lake and did the same. When logs are taken out for a flood, logs are taken out of every dam down the system to Trenton, plus a bit more than a log after awhile.

A peculiarity to the Haliburton lakes is that Crab or Nunikani Lake is never filled. Nobody lives there, so there's no point in it, Kitchen said.

And 12 Mile and Horseshoe lakes are filled during the winter for the purpose of power generation. Kitchen has to correct these little anomalies by hand, after the computer is finished.

It'll be the most math he has had to do all day.

No special rescue training

going straight down, and not continuing to flow laterally.

So right in front of the dam there is a continuous circle of water, that is so strong even rescue boats will be lost if they are caught in it. That is called the boil of the dam. And the downward pressure of the water as it comes over the dam creates whirlpools which suck you down under the surface, and you never know when or where the water will shoot you back to the surface. Your only hope of survival is if you are lucky enough the boil shoots you to the surface before you drown right at the edge of the dam and there is something to hold onto.

The problem in the Haliburton area isn't as severe as has been depicted here. Because the dams are so small, you have a good chance of getting out. And Jamieson says the current isn't so strong that you can't get out, eventually. After awhile, the water will push you out of the boil in dams in this area.

If you see someone in a boil, all the dams in Jamieson's jurisdiction have at least one ring buoy with 16 metres of rope. Get out onto the deck of the dam and throw it to the person, Jamieson says. Failing that, contact Minden OPP.

Most probably the man who would come to your aid is Constable B.J. Connelly, the divemaster at Minden. He is called to drag bodies out of rivers, or lakes.

"No one here is specially trained (for dam rescue). I would be the only one. Stanhope and Minden Fire Departments don't even have boats, I don't think."

Connelly has only been called out a few times to fetch bodies. A few years ago there was a triple drowning at Moore Falls, he says, and he had to go to Rosedale once. At Rosedale, the safety boom, a number of logs connected by a thick wire rope to prevent boats from going over the dam, had been taken away for some reason, and the person got caught in the boil and drowned.

Although the Trent operates the dams, Jamieson says none of the men there have any formal training in dam rescue. The provincial Ministry of Natural Resources operates the dams at Salerno Lake and the dam at Kinnmount. They say no one there has any training in rescue operations for dams either.

Vandalism is a problem on the dams, Jamieson says. Sometimes people steal the life buoys, though not often. Of bigger concern to him is when people go to the dams, and roll the big logs that are used to control the water levels and dump them into the dam, cutting off the water flow. It raises the level of their lake, but it depletes those downstream. The Parks Canada men are out almost every day, so they notice things quickly, but even a day with hardly any flow can take a lake down noticeably.

If the log is rolled in improperly, Jamieson has to try to pull it up with clamps and chains—and he has to get right down by the flowing water of the dam. That can be dangerous work.

Jamieson says he has resorted to keeping the winch handles from the dams in his truck. Sometimes people steal the whole winch, which weighs over 50 kilograms and is bolted to the wooden deck. There are also safety chains thieves have to cut through. So Jamieson says he went out and bought a harder chain—and the same thing happened again.

Dams do have their advantages, however. The Orillia Water, Light and Power plant by Minden has been sending hydroelectric power to Orillia since 1935—up to 96,000 kilowatts a day. Horseshoe and 12 Mile lakes are filled again in the fall, and provide a steady flow for the generating station all winter until the spring freshet arrives.

The dams are also controlled to maximize spawning by fish. The MNR will tell Jamieson when spawning is about to occur, and Jamieson will drain the lakes more than normal to encourage the fish to spawn deeper. Once most spawning has finished, the levels are raised to cover the eggs, so as few as possible spoil.

If one association asks the Waterway to only fill their lake to 90% in the spring to avoid flooding, their lake will stay at 90% capacity all summer.

is surplus water on the Kawartha that is expendable to the evaporation that comes with those conditions.

Once all the information comes back, Kitchen phones Jamieson in Haliburton. Jamieson has worked out what the flow of the dams will be if he adds or subtracts a certain number of logs. Once he has Kitchen's information, he decides what to do.

As mentioned, the program is run every week, on a Monday night. Tuesday Jamieson is out making log changes. The lakes that are actually on the Trent are monitored every day, (by hand, not by the computer) however, and if a quick lowering is noticed, Kitchen may phone Jamieson and ask for more water by the end of the week, instead of waiting Another rule is that there has to be a minimum flow through the system to ensure water quality. The minimum flow is less now than what it was 20 years ago, said Kitchen, and as a result less water is being taken from the Highland reservoir. He added that minimum flows can be breached before navigation season starts to build up the lakes in the reservoir system.

If the lakes run too low, however, swamps below the dams in the system will drain. Then when Kitchen wants a run (and when he wants a run, he doesn't mean next week) it takes awhile for the swamps to fill up, and only after that is water sent to the Trent.

Lake levels below average despite rain

On Monday May 25 the Haliburton area lakes of the Trent-Severn Waterway were at 80.2 percent of their normal maximum levels on average. This was a decline of one percent in six days, but left the lakes still about 14 percent below the 10 year average.

Only low flows were run all week as in the previous week, because modest rains kept adding water to the downstream lakes of the canal route.

The surplus on them began to be a problem so an increase beyond the minimum outflow was made on the 25th to reduce this. Hotter weather this weekend, May 30, 31, is predicted so the levels should stop rising before any problems develop.

It is unlikely that flows greater than the minimum well be required from the reservoir lakes for at least another week.

Glamorgan council

A regular meeting of Glamorgan Township Council was held on Wednesday May 6.

Councillor Glen Madill gave a verbal report on matters discussed at the latest road and waste disposal site committee meeting.

The Road Superintendent was instructed to remove the shrubs which have been planted on Township lands in Lot 26, Concession 6, at once.

Tenders were called for the supply and installation of curb and gutter and for the supply and installation of hot mix to complete Phase 2 of the street and drainage improvement project to the specifications of the Ministry of Transportation and Communications. Tenders will close as soon as possible with no tender necessarily successful.

Councillor Madill also gave a verbal report on the latest fire committee meeting. No resolutions were tabled but it was decided that the Fire Chief should be invited to the next Council meeting to discuss Fire Department matters.

The Municipality supported the Ontario Good Roads Association's attempt to obtain increased funding for local road needs.

The students council at J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School recently made a $500 donation to the Haliburton Hospital Expansion Fund. Handing the cheque to fund chairperson Barbara Dawson is president Kyle Hewitt. Behind him are, in the front row Grade 6 reps Tammy Lee, Sarah Lilius, Bill Smith; in the second row Grade 7 reps Teresa Madill, Colin Sisson Doug Craigmyle and David Kinsella, Darcy Connaughan and staff council rep Roy Hoare.

she said. "We have led them here. I believe the board has a commitment to them." Murdoch said she respected Hemphill's position as the person charged with managing the secondary school, but the five students have been "locked in" to the course by their earlier course choices and their desire to pursue arts studies in university.

Trustee Len Salvatori noted that the board is under constant pressure from local politicians who wonder why the cost of education keeps going up, and yet "we add these little frills." He said he hoped that if trustees backed the parents and voted to keep the course, parents would also back trustees.

Although the issue was not formally put to a vote, there was general agreement among trustees that the course will be offered next year, and that staffing requirements resulting from the decision will be considered at a subsequent meeting.

The final comment on the issue came from student Ruth Stouffer. "We are stuck without this course," she told trustees. "We're really grateful to you."

Board agrees to smoke free buildings

Smoking will be eliminated in all Haliburton County schools by September of 1988, the Board of Education decided last Tuesday. But it stopped short of a total smoking ban, meaning that while employees will not be allowed to smoke within board-owned buildings, high school students will still be permitted to smoke on school property.

The board's decision supports recommendations of the joint board/teacher liaison committee.

The liaison committee also recommended that the board financially support "stop smoking" workshops for employees who want that kind of help to kick the habit.

A subcommittee of trustee Lynn Craigmyle, elementary teacher Ruth Lewis, HHSS vice principal Gary Brohman and CUPE member Lori Roberts has been formed, and four smokers will be invited to join the committee so plans for the transition to a smoke free environment inside the schools can be laid down.

An exercise in living history

The olden days of Haliburton will come back to life on July 1 this year.

To mark Canada Day and kickoff the first of this summer's series of heritage walks, a number of local people have agreed to portray prominent citizens of a century ago, dressed in period costumes and standing in front of the buildings with which they were associated.

Leo Dobrzensky, one of the organizers of the heritage walks which began last summer and proved so popular that they will be repeated again this summer, says as many local people as possible will be encouraged to help create the pioneer mood in Haliburton on July 1. She asks that anyone who has period clothing consider wearing it and appearing on the streets on July 1, or if they would prefer, loaning the clothing to another person for that day.

It will be an ambitious start to the walks, which last year attracted as many as 25 people at a time, and added another dimension to tourism in the community.

The Canada Day walk will be "an exercise in living history" Mrs. Dobrzensky says. "We would like as many people as possible to get in on the fun" by dressing up in period costumes.

Several local people who have agreed to portray historical figures of the community. Tim Casey will be stationed at the municipal office as councillor Dugan, who was a member of Dysart council at the time the present building was constructed to replace an earlier one destroyed by fire. Jean Casey will portray her great grandmother Isabella Gould, a pioneer settler who helped earn a living for her family by selling farm produce. Mrs. Casey will carry the wicker basket in which Isabella Gould brought eggs to sell to townsfolk.

Mary Packard will portray Mrs. James L. Brown, a Scotswoman and wife of the builder who is said to have built the two substantial brick houses adjacent to the liquor store, one of which is now the office of lawyers Bishop and Rogers.

Phurness Watt will be Tom Carruthers, a remittance man well known in the community's early history.

"We need a butcher to stand in front of Dawson's Insurance and a barber to stand in front of the Brohm building" at the end of main street, Mrs. Dobrzensky said.

As well, she hopes someone with an English accent will agree to portray Mr. Freeman, the original owner of Bank's Store, one of the principal attractions on the heritage walk.

The walks will be held each Wednesday morning throughout the summer, and anyone with an interest in local history is invited to go along, or to assist the guides in recalling Haliburton's beginnings.

Throughout the summer, walk guides will wear period costumes to help recreate the ambience of pioneer Haliburton.

Nature reminds us what is important

ment" is when many things are begun and nothing is completed.)

Talking with a local preacher he summed it up by joking "we're not a small town church anymore. We're a middle sized church. This means we have to get organized and have programs and professionals". It's true. (Development is not people helping people, it is structures and systems "in place" for delivery of services.)

I remember living in Bramalea, "Canada's First Suburban City". Those in charge of development scraped off a tidy sum and left a monster to be managed. The poor got poorer and — of course, I see those signs in Haliburton too. Almost a panic among the haves to have more and a growing lethargy in others who kind of wander the streets. Everyone is poised for the mass influx of tourism to happen next weekend, the beginning of what it's all about.

There is a certain heartache at the way of the city takes hold of the small town. But it had to come. It has been coming for a long time. There is no place that is not the city.

Walking to town today Martha Perkins flew by, off to write another story of treasured memories, keeping our past alive, perhaps in hope that the values of the past will mix with today to enrich it rather than be lost forever.

If you haven't guessed it, I was troubled. There is a time to mourn, a time to weep. To deny sorrow is to deny life its truth. I would not have us "go back", but I reserve the right to weep about "progress" and its price as well as to dance and to laugh.

About sundown I went to Dover Spring for that sparkling clear water that the earth still offers as a gift from her heart, and wandered on up to Skyline Park. There was no one there except a man quietly looking at the hills. We did not speak. It would have been like disturbing a man at prayer.

As I saw again the magnificent beauty of the creation that surrounds us here the clatter and chatter and greed of the human community seemed so small and foolish at the foot of the hill. The lonely man wandered away and I rushed to get Betty.

"Come on", I said, "I want to show you something" and took her back to the Lookout. The hills, the lake, the setting sun, the quiet beauty captivated us until darkness settled over the land. We stayed until we shivered in the cold and until the gentle, sad, peace of the Haliburton Highlands had filled our souls.

Have you been up to Skyline Park lately? It reminds you of whose you are. The Creation is not development. It doesn't need it.

Tran LaRue learns to lead at Rotary sponsored event

by KEITH SCHAEFER
Staff Reporter

EVERY GENERATION, new leaders emerge on our political, social and economic scene, both on a broad and local level. One of those leaders may well be Tran LaRue.

LaRue, 18, was chosen by the Rotary Club of Haliburton to go on the RYLA program—Rotary Youth Leadership Award. He attended a three day conference at Canadore college in North Bay.

Brian Black, a Rotarian who sat on the selection committee, said LaRue fitted all their criteria. "We felt he had good leadership qualities, which would help him down the road. Tran showed a lot of potential. Everybody felt he would do well. He does well at school, and he is an excellent athlete, and he does things around the community."

LaRue is very sports minded. He was a defensive back on the high school football team, played on the hockey team, he pitches for Legion Warriors, and he plays squash, tennis, curling, golf and badminton. He wouldn't say what his grades were, but he said he's studying harder this year than any year before.

Next year, LaRue will be going to either Wilfrid Laurier University in Waterloo, for business, or to Laurentian University in Sudbury for Sports Administration.

RYLA has been in Toronto for some time, but this was the first year the district Haliburton is in has hosted one. There were 17 people there in total. Each Rotary club in the district applies, but not all are selected. Selection is done a lottery basis.

The candidates didn't have to be a student, and could be up to 25 years old. Rotarian Dale Robinson said the award is to a promising young person who can apply the skills they've learned to their position in life.

LaRue drove up to North Bay on the Friday night. He said they just had an orienteering session then, but Saturday they went right to work. La Rue said he worked from nine in the morning until 10 in the evening, over the course of three sessions, each lasting at least three hours. On Sunday he had two seminars totalling six hours, and Monday they did evaluations of the courses.

LaRue said he liked the seminar on current social issues the best.

"There was a sergeant from North Bay, who talked about the issues they deal with—rape, murder. He told us how we as leaders could help our community."

"Like, if someone is selling drugs to younger children, do something about it."

"In the human relations seminar, a professor from the college showed us some group dynamics. He put the 17 of us in a circle, and showed us how hard it was to get a new group started—how hard it is to communicate."

"He gave us this fake robbery to solve—each person had three clues and we had to go around and figure out who did it. That took us an hour and a half."

LaRue said the experience was a good one. He said it sharpened his skills as a leader, and made him more aware of what he was doing.

"You know what to do in a situation, usually, you just don't realize the steps. They break problems down for you."

One of the seminars was "opportunity for service". LaRue said he is going to volunteer a lot more now. "You take every opportunity you can to volunteer—you'll be a better person because of it," he said. LaRue coaches a baseball team for people under 16.

LaRue said he made friends with some people he didn't quite expect to be friendly. "One guy was from Fenelon Falls, and we had played high school hockey against them. We played them in the COSSA finals, in fact. We were playing in the championship game, and the play got kind of rough. This one guy came around me and we had a few words."

"As soon as I walked in the room at the college, I knew we recognized each other. While we were sitting in the circle, this guy drew my hockey number on a piece of paper, and held it up for me to see. I nodded. He was really a good guy."

LaRue had to give a short speech to the Rotary Club once he returned, and by all indications, his report was favourable and the program will continue next year.

You take every opportunity you can to volunteer - you'll be a better person because of it.

High school band hosts exchange as students from Sharbot Lake visit

The Haliburton Highlands High School Band got a chance to meet some new people and hear a few new tunes last week.

The Sharbot Lake High School Concert Band was in town on an exchange between the two schools. They were here May 27-30, while Haliburton paid them a visit two weeks earlier for four days.

Rick Vaughan, the music teacher and organizer of the exchange, said he has been running a band exchange for seven years now.

"It provided a good opportunity for the students to get to know some new people, and it gave a good chance to perform," said Vaughan.

The two bands played last Thursday night in the end of the year concert for a packed crowd of 200 people, Vaughan said. He added the heat for the concert was oppressive, but everyone enjoyed themselves.

While Sharbot Lake was here, they went on a tour of the Highland Museum, Martin's Mill, and toured some of the resorts on Lake Kashagawigamog. They also spent a day at camp Kandalore, north of Carnarvon, where they learned about orienteering, and canoeing.

When Haliburton was in Sharbot Lake, about a two and a half hour drive, the students drove an extra hour to spend a day in Ottawa, touring the parliament buildings and the National Arts Centre.

There were 45 students from Haliburton in the exchange, and 25 from Sharbot Lake. The students billeted in each other's homes while they stayed in their counterpart's town.

The Hughes brothers sing praise to their faith

The Bible is important in family life says family who seek to live by its precepts

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

ONE WOULD expect that if you ever tried to get six brothers to do something together, the result would be chaos. Yet with the Hughes brothers—Wesley, Jonathan, David, Timothy, Nathan and Mark—the result is the exact opposite. Whenever they get together they're in perfect harmony.

The Hughes Brothers is the official name these boys go under when they take their program of music, magic, memorization and message to various church and children groups throughout the county. With their mother Evonne at the piano, and father Charles directing them, they put whatever personal differences they have behind them in order to entertain their audience.

The same sense of togetherness does not end when they stop performing. The entire way of life the Hughes enjoy is based on the principals in the Bible, of a family working as a whole for the good of all. The Christian messages in their act are carried out in their home.

"A Biblical family pattern we see as being ideal," explains Mr. Hughes. "These Bible principals are valid and it works for us because we are committed to it."

This goes far beyond saying your prayers before bedtime or singing Christian songs to other people. Everyday life is structured around these principals, which include a belief in discipline, hard work and simple pleasures. In talking with the Hughes, you feel as if you're taken back into yesteryear, when local families were self-sufficient and depended on the sweat on their brow to feed their families.

Most outside people see their commitment to an ideal when the brothers visit churches, nursing homes, community centres and schools to perform.

Dressed in matching blue blazers and red ties, they put on a show designed to entertain and uplift their audiences, changing their routines to suit the type of people they have in front of them.

For instance, when they're performing in front of a group of Sunday School children, Wesley will be sure to try a few of his magic tricks. Pulling rabbits out of a box is one of his slights of hand, but every trick he does has a Biblical parable to go along with it.

He learned some of these tricks at the JIM Camp—Jesus is Mine—in the United States. Normally he just goes for two weeks every summer, but this year he and Jonathan are going for a whole month. The camp teaches magic tricks but also trains the children in public speaking, memorization and recitation. Wesley also plays the trombone and Jonathan plays the trumpet and a mean musical saw.

A musical saw is the instrument Mrs. Hughes' father used to play when he took his children around the province to perform in a similar fashion. Indeed, it was when Evonne and her family came up to Harcourt to perform that she met Charles Hughes, who had lived there for a few years previously.

"We feel we have songs people should hear," she says. "They express the happiness we've found in Jesus Christ and we feel we should use what we have in this way."

When she was growing up, Mrs. Hughes was a lot like her boys, wishing she was outside playing baseball instead of practising piano. She may not have liked it then, just as her sons sometimes find it a bit trying, but today she is glad she has the skill and doesn't regret those lessons at all.

Wesley agrees with her in that the main reason he sees in their going out into the public to perform is "to promote the Christian faith." The children help their parents choose the songs they will sing, either as a group or in smaller combinations.

The response to the boys' performance is usually

A family message

The Hughes family live their lives according to the Bible, and one way they like reaching out to others is through the Hughes Brothers' act, which includes music, magic, memorization and message. Last week they went to the Lakeside Baptist Church to perform for the Salvation-Army sponsored Over 60 Club. Standing on the stairs, from the bottom, and from left: Wesley, Jonathan, Timothy, David, Mark, Nathan, Charles and Evonne Hughes.

quite positive, Mr. Hughes says, and he believes the learning all those songs is also a good way to enhance their memorization skill, something he believes is useful in life. The same holds true for dedicating themselves to their piano lessons, even though they sometimes wish they are out playing baseball instead.

Playing baseball is a favourite occupation of the boys when their lessons and their chores are over. The Hughes live by a river, so fishing is also a popular way to spend their leisure time.

But there's not much time to spare sometimes considering how much work has to be done around the farm. The family keeps livestock as well as grow their own crops and as any of the old farmers can tell you, this takes a lot of hard work and dedication.

Yet to the boys, that hard work can be lots of fun too. Timothy really likes to ride the tractor, and says some of his friends around Wilberforce tell him they'd rather be driving a tractor too instead of sitting at home watching television. (The Hughes don't have a television, something which gives the boys the incentive to go out riding their bikes instead of staying inside.)

Timothy also likes planting and working on the barn the Hughes are building as a family. "It's just fun," he says, although he admits a chore he doesn't like is picking stones or cutting wood, a major task for the Hughes since they heat their home entirely by fuelwood.

Brother David agrees doing the chores can be lots of fun, except doing the dishes. In fact all the boys don't seem to mind helping out on the farm.

Because they are kept so busy, organization is vital in the Hughes family, a task left up to Mr. Hughes. "I believe if they're kept constantly busy, it will keep them from getting in trouble."

The boys admit this way of life sometimes makes them seem different from their friends, but after a while, everyone ignores any differences and go about just acting like any other children would act. The boys attending J. Douglas Hodgson are in the school band and while Jonathan and Wesley both won the public speaking competition in their classes, Jonathan went on to win the school and county competition as well. (The boys attend the Wilberforce Public School, where their father is the principal, then learn their Grade 5 and 6 lessons at home from their father, and then go to J. Douglas Hodgson from Grades 7 and 8.)

The boys don't know what all of this will lead to in the future, but right now they seem pretty happy spending their time going out into the community and putting on a show which reflects their life at home.

New residents are welcomed to Hyland Crest Home SENIOR LEAGUE

by Pearl Lyle

Hello readers! Our week started with services on Sunday evening with Rev. and Mrs. J. Burgess in charge with Mr. and Mrs. Thompson assisting. Tuesday morning, service in the chapel was conducted by Rev. Kent of the Minden Baptist Church.

We welcome to Hyland Crest two new residents, Mr. and Mrs. Gauthier. We hope that they will like it here.

I'm sorry to report the sudden death of Helena Brown. She has been here a long time and we will miss her very much.

The ladies came from West Guilford on Thursday for our tea party. After enjoying the goodies very much, we had a sing song.

Terry Barnum came and had dinner with his mother on Thursday. Mr. and Mrs. Roy Cameron of Peterborough came to visit her sister Winnie Barnum and went out for dinner on Sunday.

Jean Taylor was the guest of her niece for lunch and dinner on Saturday. I had my grandson Bob and his family from North Bay to see me on the weekend and we went to call on George Hewitt and family. Dora Dawson had June Wright in on Saturday and also Mr. and Mrs. Ferrier who are old friends from Lancaster. Mrs. Buttery had a niece visit with her on the 24th. Edna Cowan has been away all weekend.

Since attending a wedding on Saturday she has been with members of her family.

We just learned that one of our nurses, Judy Toye, has a fine baby boy. Congratulations to Judy and her husband Ian.

All till next week!

Guild of Fine Arts pleased with better financial picture

The Haliburton Highlands Guild of Fine Arts brought an official end to one of its most successful years at the annual meeting held last Thursday night in Haliburton. Financial statements presented at the meeting show revenues of $182,986 for the year, almost $40,000 more than anticipated. The surplus allowed the allocation of $12,000 to working funds, the first time a substantial surplus has been carried over into the next year's operating budget.

Principal reason for the rosy financial picture was the success of exhibitions and sales at the Gallery and the summer sale at J. Douglas Hodgson school. Admissions, sales and rentals at the Rails End Gallery generated $52,552, when only $33,700 had been anticipated, and the summer exhibition and sale brought in $63,333, compared with anticipated revenues of $50,000.

The balance of the Guild's revenue came from Ontario Arts Council and municipal grants, fund raising projects and memberships.

President Joan Hoad expressed the Guild's gratitude for the support of the Municipality of Dysart and the Ontario Arts Council, and thanked local businesses and citizens who contribute each year to the children's scholarship fund.

The president said one of her main goals over the past year was to improve community relations, and to that end, she reactivated the local artists in the schools programme, which was well received. As well, she said she is particularly proud of the Guild column and its writers, Virginia Muenzel, Leo Dobzensky, Gwynneth Hughes and Shirley Hodgson.

A highlight of the evening was the presentation of two honorary memberships and an honourable mention to people who have made outstanding contributions to the Guild for a number of years. Marion Langdon and Marie Wallace each received honorary memberships and a batik picture by Marie Wallace depicting the Rails End Gallery. Maxine Curry, who was unable to be present at the meeting, is already an honorary member, but she was once again thanked for the help she gives the Guild in staffing the summer sale, and acting as a volunteer captain to collate, stamp and sort and stamp the monthly newsletters.

Rounding out the business portion of the meeting was the appointment of seven people to fill vacancies on the board of directors for the coming year. Those who will serve on the board are Rita Barry, dining room manager at Sir Sam's Inn; Wendy Bateman, an avid weaver and teacher of weaving techniques; Vivienne Hill, a retired Volvo Canada executive; Alex McLeod, a retired senior manufacturing executive with IBM; Jane Miller, a teacher at Gooderham school who has art and art-related experience; Stephen Patrick, a former television writer, director and executive producer; and LaDonna Smith, a registered massage therapist who practices in Haliburton.

Board members with one term remaining include Joan Hoad, Ginie Muenzel, Mimi Carson, Jean Farrell, David Risk and Barbara Peel.

Two long time Guild workers were honoured at the annual meeting last Thursday. Marie Wallace, left, and Marion Langdon, right, were presented with honorary memberships and the batiks they are holding. At centre is Guild president Joan Hoad.

Crafts people prepare for summer

GUILD NOTES

by Gwen Hughes

We had a well attended Annual Meeting at the Curling Club Thursday May 28. We are all interested in knowing who this year's board members are, so — here they are — Mimi Carson, Jean Farrell, Ginie Muenzel, Barbara Peel, David Rusk, Joan Hoad, Jane Miller, Alex McLeod, Wendy Bateman, Melissa Stephens, Stephen Patrick, Vivienne Hill, Rita Barry and LaDonna Smith. A new president will be chosen from these people as Joan Hoad who served so ably in this capacity has resigned.

The many craft's people are busy preparing for the summer sale in July. People from other parts of Ontario are also showing great interest in the sale — but then, this has been the case for years. Wherever one goes in the province people seem to be aware of Haliburton's Summer School and our Art Shows and Sale.

Some dates to remember — June 2, Knitters' meeting at 10:30 to 2:30. June 3, Guild committee meeting, 9:30 a.m. at the Gallery. June 6, Presidents' pot luck. June 8, Weavers' and Spinners' meeting at the Gallery. June 8, Rug Hookers, Minden. June 15, Rug Hookers, Pot Luck. June 24, Board of Directors meeting, 9 a.m. Sir Sandford Fleming College.

Chuck O'Neil is having a one man show June 16 to July 5 at the Bronte Post Office Gallery, Oakville. He will be present June 20 from 1:00 to 5:00 p.m. to meet the people. While some of his pictures have been shown with other artists' work this is his first major show outside of Haliburton County. Most of the pictures are new to the public as he has been busy all winter preparing for this event. Our own Gallery will be showing some of Chuck's work along with that of Mary Hasting in August.

This is a busy month, as usual, so we'll no doubt be meeting each other at one or more events.

Wilberforce welcomes Bob Park, with his wife and two children as the new owner/operator of the Wilberforce IGA. Bob will soon be taking up residence here, so good luck in your business and your residence. You'll love the friendly clientele of Wilberforce and area.

St. Margaret's Anglican Church, Wilberforce, will be holding a mammoth Garage/Rummage and Bake Sale on Saturday June 27, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Church Rectory. All donations are welcome, for free pick-up contact 448-2248.

The ladies of Monmouth have completed a beautiful quilt, which will be on display at the Wilberforce IGA. Tickets will be sold as the quilt will be raffled off with all proceeds being donated to the Continuous Care Unit of Haliburton Hospital. Lucky the person who wins this beautiful prize.

Branch 624, Wilberforce, Royal Canadian Legion, are holding a 'Drum Head Service' on Sunday June 7 at 1:00 p.m. After a service at the Cenotaph the parade will march to the arena for the remainder of the service. Come out everyone who loves a parade!

The Tuesday night bridge club, held at Tory Hill Recreation Centre announces these winners. First prize to Nick Lehoczyk of Eagle Lake, second prize to Lance DeCory of Essonville and third prize to Eric Andrews of Wilberforce. The consolation prize to Maria Lehoczyk. Anyone interested in playing bridge is welcome to attend.

The newly formed art group, which has been meeting at the Harcourt Community Centre on Mondays at 7 p.m. and Tuesdays at 1 p.m. will be disbanding for the summer months. This venture was a great success, with sometimes 20 people of all ages trying their hand at drawing and painting, with the generous help of Clair Loft, founder of the group. Don't Wind Up in the Drink

Going for a swim when your head's already swimming is an open invitation to trouble. Water sports and alcohol just don't mix. So before you dive in, be sure you haven't been in the drink. The message is quite simple — leave the alcohol behind.

Sugar for your coffee? Try 5 mL... that's about one teaspoon.

Legion holds bingo for little boy

KINMOUNT

by Millie Moss

Results of St. James Hall five and a half tables of euchre last Tuesday evening are: ladie's high, Nora Crego, ladie's low, Tracy Waite, men's high, Lloyd Crego, men's low, Mike Cain, lone hands, Sabina Birkett.

I'm told that severe lightning early one morning last week hit the Bell Tower and put the machines out of commission for a time.

Cecile Schell has been a welcome visitor from the West, at the home of Ruby Schell of late.

John Pyke celebrated a birthday on May 26 and visitors on his special day included Mary Pyke, Helen Graham, Hilda and Jesse Buxcey, all of Norland and Jason, Bill and Millie Moss of Kinmount. I hope you had a good day Jack!

The Kinmount Railroad Drop-in Centre euchre results on Thursday April 28 are: ladie's high, Helen Hickey, who also held most lone hands, ladie's low, Lil Platt, men's high, Wayne Black, men's low, Sabina Birkett.

The Coboconk Legion held a special "Christmas in May" bingo on Thursday evening, May 28. Tickets were sold on three lovely handmade sweaters donated by a very thoughtful lady and the proceeds along with the donations which brought the total to well over $200 is to be given to the little boy in Kirkfield who is suffering from leukemia. Many prizes, free coffee and cookies, lovely house plants were some of the evenings goodies and special awards were presented to Pearl Bradimore, Bill and Millie Moss for attendance. There was even a little tree all lit up and I'm sure everyone enjoyed their evening very much. Our thanks to everyone who helped make the party so pleasant.

To everyone who has asked why Jason had been limping and off school for five days, thanks for your concern. I had written in the last column all about his accident and under the circumstances thought I should warn others of the dangers to their youngsters on the teeter totter at the Kinmount Park. It was rather a lengthy article and every bit of it was true but for some reason, the editor did not see fit to print it. Anyway, thank you once again folks. Jason is now back at school and stitches are to be taken out on June 1.

We enjoyed a phone visit from May Campbell in Miami, Florida last Saturday morning.

Bill Moss Jr. has been in the States and points east for the past week and is now back home.

Did you happen to look upward late Thursday night, May 28? I never saw the sky look like that before! It had large patches with long streaks of white, much like the Northern Lights but with the weather as warm as it was that night, all I could think of it was that we were in for some kind of awful storm.

Yes, I still write the column. I'm sorry your news hasn't appeared for the last two weeks but due to circumstances beyond my control it didn't appear last week but two weeks ago we spent most of the long weekend in Fort Erie visiting my mother, Eva Harrison, my sister June and her husband Hank Stuart, my sister Barbara Smith and her daughter Melinda, and I didn't get it all together in time to get the column.

Sincere sympathy to the family and friends of Ritchie Harrison, Bert Conway, Helena Brown, Wilda Priest, Ellen Madill, Catherine Baker and Mr. Roy Barker.

Hint for the week: To clean ceramic tiles, use one part vinegar and three parts water.

Belated happy birthday and best wishes to Don McKinnon who's birthday was Saturday May 23, Dorothy Muirhead Sunday May 24, Bob Ackerblade and Jay Hughes Saturday May 30, Neil Hughes Thursday June 4, Vera Harrison June 2, Bernie Smith, May 10, Vickey Stuart May 21, Maud Campbell May 21, Jean Taylor May 22 and Adam Payne on June 1.

The 1st Minden Brownie Pack spent an enjoyable tent out trip to Canada Wonderland last week end. We appreciate the good care that their leaders and helpers took of our girls.

A customer appreciation day was held in conjunction with the LCBO's 60th anniversary, at the Minden outlet with an Open House on Monday June 1. They had free cake, cookies and coffee.

There will be a dance at Club 35 at 8 p.m. on Saturday June 6 featuring Just Plain Country. As usual no alcohol is allowed.

We wish Marie and John Kovacs all the best at the Wagon Wheel restaurant.

Happy anniversary to Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Ackerblade on Thursday June 4.

The Minden Home and School Association are holding their Fun Fair at the Archie Stouffer

Elementary School on Saturday June 13. If you have any books, toys, knick knacks etc. that you have no more use for, they would be very much appreciated.

Congratulations to Bill Hamilton. Bill was entered into the Oshawa Sports Hall of Fame on May 30. Bill was a former Olympic cyclist who also took part in the British Empire Games.

The Walk for Water starts at the Carnarvon Zion United Church on Saturday June 6. Meet and greet 6 to 7 p.m. Barbecue 7 to 9, and dance 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Music by Detour. Dinner and Dance $10. per person, dinner only $7. per person and dance only $4. per person.

Variety Show is planned for June 20

DORSET NEWS

by Phyllis Briscoe

The hot, hazy, humid, showery weather really kept the grass growing. The Humming birds are guzzling the nectar put out for the, the robins are busy grabbing the worms when they dare to pop up out of the soil or even show their heads. These are all signs of the time that we have been waiting patiently, and sometimes not so patiently, for. And aren't we happy that we have arrived at this special time of year, with all growing things decked out in new, fresh greenery, the scenery across a smooth expanse of water is breath taking in its beauty.

The Social Club had a great time last week. The entertainment was a film, Cocoon, which had lots of laughs and some pathos and was enjoyed by everyone.

There was a good turn out. The Club is very unhappy that it is losing two of its most valued members. Art and Marg Walkden are moving to Niagara Falls and will leave a vacancy difficult to fill. Both Art and Marg have been active in the Club since they moved here. Marg served a term as President and Art as Treasurer and both have taken an interested part in developing programs for the members as well as improving facilities in the club room. Their contributions have been many and they will be greatly missed.

A Variety Show is being planned for Saturday evening of June 20 at the Dorset Community Centre. The cast is to be made up mostly of local talent along with a group directed by Nina Robertson, who have already put on a show in Baysville, where they received rave reviews. Many years have slipped by since this type of show was put on in Dorset and the participants are sure they have planned something that everyone will enjoy. If anyone wishes to join the group there is still plenty of time, just call Shirley McDonald, Gloria Morris or Nina Robertson. Tickets will be on sale shortly. Adults $4 and children $2. Plan on keeping that evening free and come out and have a fun time and support local talent. This event is being sponsored by Knox United Church.

We have some happy birthday wishes to send along, our two local store keepers, Jack Clayton and Brad Robinson celebrated on the 6th, Lorraine Weatherell on the eight and Kate MacKay on the 9th. Many happy returns to each and all.

H.H. After shampooing your hair, add 1/4 cup of vinegar to the rinse water. It softens the hair and brings out the highlights.

Contracts have fine print INFORMATION

By Doreen Hawman

Are you considering making some major repairs or improvements to your house or property? First, is the selection of a contractor, getting two estimates is always the wise thing to do. The estimate you decide upon should be written in the form of a contract. Before signing, make sure this lists any extras, the type and amount of work to be done, total cost, the date of completion and who is responsible for cleaning up afterwards.

Always read the fine print. Avoid "progression" clauses which say you must pay at specified times during the course of the work regardless of whether or not the job is progressing to your satisfaction.

Make sure all sub-trades are covered and listed in the contract in order to avoid a nasty surprise of being presented with a bill you thought was covered in the estimate.

Check warranties and guarantees carefully. A contractor's reputation and length of time in business is important. A "10" year guarantee is of no value, if the contractor goes out of business. If a large amount of money is involved it may be wise to have a lawyer go over the contract, in order to spot any hidden clauses before you sign.

Never pay the full amount of the contract before all work is completed.

If you require help with forms or have a question that needs answering, contact the Haliburton County Information Centre in the Drag River Municipal Building, Maple Ave., Haliburton, open daily 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. or call 457-2733. Our office in Minden situated in the Municipal Building, Milne St., is open every Tuesday 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. or call 286-4100.

Become a volunteer by calling your nearest County Information Centre.

The First Haliburton Cub Pack held a ticket raffle on May 14 to raise money for the new extension to the Haliburton Hospital. A total of $540 was raised for this extension. The winning tickets for the draw were Kim Griffin of RR2, Minden and Tony Salvatori of Haliburton. Kim will receive a hand crafted clock donated by Ted Dettlerling. Tony will receive a pair of hand quilted pillows donated by Heather Poppe. There was a prize for the Cub who sold the most tickets and Scott Whittaker sold a total of 125 tickets. Scott will receive his prize at the Annual Year End Banquet, held in June. Ken Wilson was at the Cub Hall for the draw and to accept the money on behalf of the committee for the Hospital Fund.

Baseball season begins, team opens with Kinmount win

by Mary Hadley

Bridge winners last Tuesday evening at the Tory Hill Recreation Centre were: first, Nick Lehoczy of Eagle Lake; second, Lance DeCory of Essonville; third, Eric Andrews of Wilberforce. Maria Lehoczy took the consolation prize.

Mere and Ann Pickens visited Merle's mother, Mrs. Mae Pickens and other family members recently. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Dan Mulligan, also of Timmins.

Ivan Hunter and Ron Barr attended a meeting of the Haliburton Advisory Board of the C.N.I.B. at the Lakeside Motel last Wednesday. Ron is chairman of the board which met to discuss plans for the September C.N.I.B. canvass.

High score winners at the euchre games last Wednesday evening in the Community Centre were Verna Webster and Warren Mitchell of Tory Hill. Three ladies, Mabel Winder, Honi Billings and Marilyn Winder tied for the most lone hands while Dave Winder topped the number of men's lone hands. Hubert Dunsford of Wilberforce settled for the consolation prize. This concluded the Wednesday euchre games till September 2 when they will resume. Thanks to Anne Franke who has been faithful in taking charge for the winter season. Lynn Pagels will carry on for the summer months when the games will be held in the Community Centre on Thursday evenings starting June 4 at 7 p.m.

Beatrice Hillis was the lucky jackpot winner at bingo a week ago last Monday night. These games continue each Monday evening in the Community Centre, the early bird starting at 6:45 p.m.

Best wishes to Mrs. Lula Dovell whose 93rd birthday is on June 6. This busy lady donated a quilt—her own handiwork—the proceeds from which go to the Haliburton Hospital Expansion Fund.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Purcell have sold their home on the Buckhorn Road North and have moved to Gravenhurst. A few years ago the Purcells owned and operated the store now known as the "Gooderham Foodtown". Their friends will be sorry to see them leave and wish them health and happiness in their new home.

Dawn Denis, fiancée of Terry Stoughton, was the guest of honour at a bridal shower in the Community Centre last Saturday evening. Dawn thanked the ladies for the wide variety of beautiful and practical gifts she received. A pleasant evening was spent viewing the gifts and partaking of refreshments to tempt the taste buds.

Edythe Dewey has returned after spending a week with her son, Gary, and his family in North Bay.

The baseball season has started. Our Gooderham men's team played their first game a week ago Sunday against Kinmount with a win. Last Sunday they lost when they played Irondale. They play a home game next Sunday at 2 p.m.

Couple mark anniversary

WEST GUILFORD

by Eleanor Cooper

Kay and Jack Barry hosted a great celebration at the Centre on Saturday. Many friends accepted their kind invitation to help them celebrate their 50th Wedding Anniversary.

After the toasts and speeches in honour of the occasion people made the most of visiting with people they hadn't seen in years. The Barry's sons, Tom, Gary and Reg. were present and several grandchildren as well. Kay's cousin, Colleen of Kilworth was present and also Kay's twin sisters Alice Turner and Iris Acres from Regina area and her sister Doreen Swinger from Toronto.

A unique record of the guests will be kept. Kay had everyone autograph a lace-edged tablecloth. The date with her name and Jack's was embroidered in the centre of the cloth and Kay will embroider the signatures to be an attractive remembrance of a happy day.

The United Church Women of Maple Lake United Church will take the service this Sunday to commemorate the 25th Anniversary.

AIR
AT No Extra Charge

"No Air, No Deal!"

Quote of local citizen Elwood Cranston.
On Monday, Elwood Cranston walked into the showroom of a County Mercury Dealer. His first words were "No Air, No Deal!" He explained, the heat of the summer was nearly upon us and to keep his pet "Bare Naked Rooster" cool, while traveling, he needed an Air Conditioned car. He'd always owned a Ford, but if he couldn't get a good deal on a car with Air Conditioning there'd be no deal, he'd just stick with his present Ford and an open window. A County Mercury Courteous Salesperson was quick to point out to Elwood that till Saturday June 6th, 1987, only he could purchase a Brand New Escort GL with AIR CONDITIONING included for only $8,450. He also told Elwood that he could have NO EXTRA CHARGE AIR CONDITIONING on selected Taurus, Topaz and Tempos. As Elwood drove away in his Red Escort GL he was heard to say to his pet Rooster "There's a Good Deal Better, Right Now, At Your County Mercury Dealers!"

12-P-3

HOUSE, winterized cottage or rural farm-style home & property, wanted to rent, in or near a village or town, wanted by landscape architect & artist/writer spouse who wish to locate on or within reasonable distance of Hwy. 35 and the surrounding lake areas, from approximately Lindsay, Fenelon Falls, Rosedale, Cobocok, Norland; AND we may even consider looking as far north as Minden/Haliburton. We are looking for a year-round home, or a combination residential/commercial package of a home, close enough to Hwy. 35, from which we could operate a landscaping/garden centre/nursery business eventually. We'd like to rent at first; but could be interested in option-to-buy, should our business experiment prove successful in the area; in which case, we could decide to settle permanently, sometime in the future. We require complete privacy; we prefer rustic wood & stone architecture, a fireplace, we are naturalists - so would enjoy a wooded or lake property/home. We'd like a barn or shed for stock, and we also enjoy animals. These are our preferences, but ALL replies will be considered since we are in our 60's and we wish to retire in one of the above mentioned areas, eventually. We would maintain and landscape for reasonable controlled rent and long lease. This could be an excellent opportunity for an investment, landlord to have good tenants, and to have professional landscaping, done, which would increase the value of your property. Write: Agent "Ashley", P.O. Box 778, Fenelon Falls, Ontario KOM 1N0, or phone (705) 887-1039.

AND MINDEN RECORDER

Second Section

New Stedmans complex to open, shoppers welcome store's return

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

A COUPLE decides to drive into Haliburton to do some chores. Since both of them have lots to do, they agree to get their own chores done and then meet somewhere. Where will I pick you up, the husband asks. His wife's reply: Stedmans.

This is something Vince Connaughan imagines is going to happen quite often in the future. It's not just because he thinks people can get a lot of their shopping done at his Stedmans store, but also because with the concept of his new mall, people will be able to browse through the 14 other stores and then rest on one of the benches inside the main lobby. A lot of wives will be found there, Mr. Connaughan believes, sitting on the bench and waiting for their husbands to come pick them up.

Last August, Mr. Connaughan stood on the main street of Haliburton along with hundreds of other people and watch his former Stedmans store become engulfed in flames. That store had been his pride and joy for 17 years and watching it burn was an obviously heart-wrenching affair. But like the fictional phoenix, a new store has been built from the ashes and it is a store Mr. Connaughan can be just as proud of, and believes other people will be too.

"I wouldn't wish a fire on anyone," he says, "but with what I can see in the future, it may be a blessing in disguise."

The new Stedmans store has just about the same number of retail space as the old store, but now it is spread about on one floor—not three. You enter the store by going through the main doors off the main street and turn right at the first doorway. If you go farther down the L-shaped hallway, you can go into the other stores, which all have large windows facing the passersby. Downstairs there are even more retail spaces available, which you can reach through a doorway on the lower level, along with three other stores which have private entrances from York Street.

Inside the Stedmans, with its separate toy store downstairs, you will be able to find practically everything the central warehouse supplies, as Mr. Connaughan buys everything they have to offer. This means that under one roof, you have 3,000 different styles, colours and shapes to choose from.

much variety is buying "the right thing at the right time at the right price," says Mr. Connaughan. Then when he gets the merchandise it's a matter of treating his customers right "so I know I get them back."

"The theory is that the customer is always right," he adds, and though he knows there are some people who will take advantage of this goodwill, on the most part if you treat people fairly, they'll treat you fairly. "I'd rather lose $5 on a customer complaint than lose the customer and all his business over the year."

Another aspect of choosing his stock is that Mr. Connaughan keeps his type of customer in mind when he decides what items will go over better in Haliburton than in a larger centre. For instance, the new store has an entire floor stand, four levels high, filled with quilt batt. It may seem like a lot, but he knows from past experience there are a lot of quilters in the area and all that batt will be sold in a matter of days. The same holds true for the amount of wool he carries, in all sorts of colours and textures.

"In Haliburton, I would say time is used productively," he believes. A store in the city may not sell as much wool or quilting supplies, "But I don't think we have to take a backseat to anywhere in the city. We have it all here and it's a more relaxed atmosphere."

It is this type of supplies that Mr. Connaughan felt people missed the most. When he would meet people on the street, the most common complaint was there was no place in town where you could buy a spool of thread.

"There's so much in the store here that you take for granted," he points out, having learned this by not being able to be in business for nine months. "If you haven't got a spool of thread when you're doing a dress, you're kapput."

Keeping shoppers in town

One of the bad side-effects of not being able to buy those small little items in Haliburton, he believes, is that people started taking their business out of town. If you had to drive somewhere to buy some thread, chances are you'd do the rest of your shopping at the same time. Even if you decided to do your shopping in Minden, the temptation might be there to just keep on the road and go to Lindsay or Peterborough. Soon it becomes a habit to do a

She started the day after Vince and Rose Connaughan's first boy was born and Mrs. Connaughan was unable to join her husband in the store. (However, Mr. Connaughan can remember them coming to the store with the baby in a blanket, put him on a counter and start marking the merchandise.)

One of the things which won't be that new about this new store is the staff. Every one of the women who worked at the old Stedmans has come back, and for the past month, they've been back to their old haunts trying to make a little sense out of the piles and piles of boxes. A monumental task was ahead of them, but if you visited the store before it opened, you'd be amazed at how orderly everything was.

For Mrs. Roberts, there was no question about her coming back. "I enjoy my work and working with the people," she says. Her boss is fair and sell-

'Haliburton's been good to me,' says Vince Connaughan

Bright interior, plenty of shopping room characterize the new store

'I don't think we have to take a back seat to anywhere in the city. We have it all here and it's a more relaxed atmosphere' says Vince Connaughan, Stedmans owner

"For me it's a one-stop buying place," he says, adding that people from all walks of life can find something they like at his store. The stock has a very broad range and what he likes about the people who pick and buy the items for the Stedmans chains is "they go out in the market and they pick out the best they feel is available and they make that selection available to me."

The art of successfully running a store with so lot of your shopping out of town, and Mr. Connaughan hopes this new store will be able to bring them back.

"This type of store is needed in every town," he says, and with his new store. "We'll carry on as we have and hope we can serve the people. I just hope we have the same support we had previously."

"I think it's going to be bigger and better," says staff member Gladys Roberts, who was the first outside person the Connaughans hired back in 1971.

ing clothes is something she's done all her life.

Penny Pearsall would agree. She's been working for the Connaughans for nine years and "I never thought about not coming back—it gets to be a part of your life after so long, it's like a second home."

What she likes about working in Stedmans is the variety. "It's different all the time. You don't do the same things and you see different people."

Mr. Connaughan is also glad to see all his staff members come back, back, and considers himself lucky that there is such a low turn-over. While some of them got temporary jobs while the new store was being planned and built, the day of the fire, Mr. Connaughan was able to assure them he would one day be open for business again and they were all welcomed back.

"Right off the bat I knew I was going to go back into business," he says. "Haliburton's been good to me and there was no question" he would start all over again. Not only were his fellow businessmen supportive, but the night after the fire, the Connaughans and their sons Danny, 15, and Darcy, 13, were sitting down and drawing the plans of what they envisioned as a new Stedmans store. It was this drawing which was taken to the architect, who followed the concept they had set out.

The worst day

The worst day of the 10 months to follow was the first, when they had to watch everything they had worked for disappear in front of them. "The business and the building could be replaced but I think we worked hard during all those years and then suddenly in a matter of hours, you don't have anything."

From the time he graduated from highschool, Mr. Connaughan has been in the retail business. It's all he knew and all he ever wanted to know. When his old store burned down, he knew immediately what he wanted to do. The only problem was that he thought it could happen much faster.

"Not knowing the hoops and hurdles you have to jump through, I just thought you'd clean up the yard and start building," he says. That's before he started having to deal with architects, contractors, municipal by-laws and the simple fact that if you want a big building, it will take time to build.

The Connaughans liked the thought of an indoor mall, with several other businesses complementing each other and helping the other's business. "Haliburton's growing and I can see a bigger need for business," he says. When it came to filling the other stores, Mr. Connaughan decided to take his time, wanting to make sure the new businesses wouldn't be competing with his. The new mall was to be a village within a village and he wants it to be "the type of store where people can come in and like to feel at home."

If Mr. Connaughan thought not having a store to run would give him more time, he was mistaken. "I may not have been in the store, but just about everyday there was something I had to do regarding the business." One evening, his family counted 17 phone calls about the store, and those were only the phonecalls they were there to answer. "It was easy to put in a full day."

Luckily, this winter was ideal for building and there were only two days lost because of weather conditions. "Once they got the plans finalized it was just straight go" and Mr. Connaughan was there to see every stage take shape.

"Each different phase really made me feel good and then when the roof was on, the work really started and the staff was called in." Ninety-five percent of the people working on the building were local, and over the course of the months, Mr. Connaughan believes he employed more than 50 people.

Once people were working inside the building, you could see progress every day, he says. The place was a hive of activity, with electricians and drywallers competing for space with the clerks who were busy putting the stock neatly on the shelves. As the countdown for the opening grew smaller, it was easier to see a real store taking shape, not just a big box.

A very special day

Needless to say, opening day is going to be a very special and exciting one for the Connaughans. "I'll be glad to see it open," says Mrs. Connaughan, who was surprised the time passed so quickly, especially over Christmas when she thought it would be the worst. "I've been so busy with everything else, the months went by so fast."

Her husband agrees but finds it hard to find the words to describe how he will feel. "I just know I'm going to be lifted."

When the big moment arrives, "I can picture a line up on the street with everyone waiting to get in," he says. "Every one of them will be appreciated."
